Whom Do You Serve?

Campus is alive again. To those who are new to the UD community, welcome. To those who are returning, welcome home! It is good to have UD's life force back.

Inevitably, as the semester begins, I find it easy to be overly focused on the deluge of tasks and things to accomplish. The relaxing pace of summer is replaced overnight by new syllabi, a calendar of events to prepare for, clubs to join and be involved in, friends to meet, assignments to accomplish, and more. Priorities quickly grow and change. Busyness overtakes us. It is tempting sometimes, to be a slave to the ever emerging to do list.

Today we hear the prophet Joshua challenging the Israelites on their priorities - "Decide today whom you will serve, the Lord who brought you out of Egypt and who does the extraordinary before our eyes, or the gods of your ancestors." He reminds them of the good work of God in their everyday lives - urging them to remember to stay committed.

The question "whom do you serve?" is worthy of contemplating at the start of a new semester. Are we attentive to the everyday extraordinary works of God - through our learning, our service, our relationships - or do we quickly lose sight of these by being wrapped up on the tasks.

Let's strive today to be mindful of God's faithfulness, so that we can proclaim as Joshua did - "as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

Director, Campus Ministry
