NEW SPEAKERS BUREAU GUIDE AVAILABLE FROM UNIVERSITY OF DAYTON

DAYTON, Ohio — Looking for a speaker? How about a visit from Elizabeth I of England, a look at why lasers work or a discussion of women and the Catholic church?

The new edition of the University of Dayton Speakers Bureau Guide lists 116 speakers and more than 300 topics available as programs for service and professional organizations and clubs. To receive a free copy of the guide, call (513) 229-3241.

Speakers from all areas of the University are included. A psychology professor offers a program on building children's self-esteem, a Wellness Program official can talk about beginning a safe exercise program and a researcher can discuss the moral use of nuclear weapons. Other topics include organizing a concert series, international human rights, managing family conflict through communication, home security, business ethics and creating the climate for a deeper personal prayer life.

Speakers are arranged through the public relations office at UD with four weeks notice required. For more information on the UD Speakers Bureau, call (513) 229-3241.
