Biography of Bette Rogge Morse

Bette Rogge Morse was born and raised in Dayton, Ohio. She graduated from the University of Dayton in 1944 before attending Northwestern and Colombia Universities for post-graduate work in English and drama. She also received her master's degree from the University of Dayton in 1977. She has been an active radio and television personality in the Dayton area since 1951, when she began a series of commercial appearances. From 1967 to 1972 she hosted The Bette Rogge Show, a variety show on WHIO-TV, where she had also worked as women's editor and a commercial announcer. She hosted subsequent shows on other local television stations: Getting Together With Bette Rogge on GTV-19; Culture Scene on DGTV/DATV; and Senior Chronicle on FOX45.

Bette began teaching communications in 1977 at the University of Dayton, where she was also head of the university's Mother's Club and one of the first women to serve on the university's Board of Trustees (1975-1981). For her service to the community and university, Bette was awarded an honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters in 1999.

Morse has also been very active in civic affairs in the Dayton area, holding numerous positions such as president and campaign chairman of Montgomery County Easter Seals; president of the Salvation Army Advisory Board; member of the Board of MS; and charter member, along with her husband Wayne Morse Sr., of the University of Dayton's President's Club. The greater Dayton area has recognized Bette's service to the community with the Hope Chest Award, Lily Award, and the Distinguished Service Award.

Scope and Contents

The Bette Rogge Morse papers document Bette's career as a radio and television personality in Dayton, Ohio. The collection includes 569 audiovisual recordings on various media, including 8mm and 16mm film, 2-inch quadruplex videotape, 1/4-inch audiotape, VHS tapes, and DVDs. The films include original high-quality masters as well as copies of shows and interviews covering over 40 years.

The interviews cover topics of entertainment, art, politics, sports, and local issues. Bette interviewed many national celebrities such as Kirk Douglas, Erma Bombeck, and William Holden, as well as representatives of local organizations such as the Dayton Art Institute, the Dayton Opera Guild, and the National Aviation Hall of Fame.

The collection also includes biographical information, scripts, advertising materials, programs, photographs, and other documentation related to Bette's television shows. A few other professional endeavors are also documented, including Bette's work as an actress, professor, and philanthropist.

Arrangement

The Bette Rogge Morse papers are arranged in two series.
