UNIVERSITY OF DAYTON

ONE STEP CLOSER

JACQUI BOYLE
Staff Writer

Over 160 UD students and members of the Dayton community participated in the Distance 4 Dreams Minnie Marathon 5K at ArtStreet at 10 a.m. on Saturday.

The marathon was held to raise awareness of the Distance 4 Dreams organization and to raise funds for A Special Wish Foundation.

Classic Disney tunes played throughout this ArtStreet event, to give the race what senior Kaitlin Wasik called a "Disney-twist." This year, Distance 4 Dreams is sponsoring Adam Hall, a 3-year-old who was diagnosed with leukemia. Before the race, Adam and his family introduced themselves to the crowd and expressed their gratitude.

"We feel very blessed and appreciative of the whole trip, the community coming together and doing this for us," Matthew Hall, Adam's father, said. "We're on cloud nine."

Adam and his family will be provided with an all-inclusive week-

Three-year-old Adam Hall puts the medal Billy Przybyla's neck, the winner of Saturday's Minnie Marathon that raised money for the A Special Wish Foundation.

A word from the winner...Batman

Flyer News: How did you find out about the 5K on Saturday?

Billy Przybyla: I heard about the race through a friend and I heard about the cause and helping out a 3-year-old with leukemia and I couldn't resist attending such a great event for a great cause.

FN: Why did you decide to wear this costume?

BP: I decided that I would dress up as Batman, due to my roommates of 418 Lowes having a batman mask and I just had to wear black clothes. I decided to wear the outfit mainly for laughs and just to phase away from all the serious aspects of life and goof around a bit...not that I don't do that enough already.

FN: How did it feel to win by a landslide?

BP: This wasn't about competing or racing against others today. This was a day dedicated to Adam and I was just looking to go out and have fun and help out in any way possible.

FN: What do you think this race means to Adam and his family?

BP: I can't speak for them, but I hope that this will be a lasting memory for Adam and his family throughout all of their lives and I am just happy that I could do my part to help out.

FN: What was your favorite aspect of this event?

BP: My favorite aspect was actually seeing Adam up on the stage before the race and then later meeting Adam and his family to take pictures, as well as seeing a large turnout of University of Dayton coming out for such a great cause.

FN: Are you a member of Distance 4 Dreams or are you considering becoming one?

BP: I am not a member of D4D, however if I had more time left here I would definitely want to help out and will continue attending events on campus to help out the organizations to better others.

FN: As the winner of this 5K, what do you want UD to know about the significance of this event and why they should get involved in this organization?

BP: I try to put myself in the shoes of Adam's family, think of the type of struggle of having your 3-year-old son or daughter, brother or sister being diagnosed with leukemia. After that you know that your friends, family, and community will be there for you. So why wouldn't you want it to be the same from the outside looking in.

Greek community spend week doing service, competing for titles

KARA HOHNECKER
Staff Writer

Despite each University of Dayton fraternity and sorority supporting individual philanthropies, each is coming together this week to help causes close to campus.

From Wednesday to Friday, over 300 members of the UD Greek community participated in the Greek Week of Service, preceding Greek Week.

The Greek community painted the inside of a school and helped establish a library in collaboration with City Day Elementary, 320 S. Main St. Over 2,000 books have been collected and the book drive will continue through Friday.

Porter Paints, 816 S. Main St., donated over $3,000 worth of paint and supplies, enough to paint City Day's entire gym and second floor in their school colors.

"It's amazing to see rival sororities and fraternities put aside differences for a great cause," said Brian Bailey, Greek Week of Service chair. "It is truly amazing to see what we were able to get accomplished in just three days."

Other Greek Week events began Sunday with "The Amazing Race," a competitive scavenger hunt between the different Greek organizations. Yesterday one male and one female from each sorority and fraternity competed for the title of Greek God and Goddess. Tonight campus students are invited to hear Charles Garcia, a nationally known CEO, entrepreneur and proven leader, speak in the KU Ballroom at 9 p.m. The Greek community invites all campus students to many of the events.

Other events include Greek Week Senior Night, Puttin' on the Hits, Greek Olympics and the awards ceremony, concluding the weeklong Greek community celebration.

Money raised throughout Greek Week will go to Distance 4 Dreams, a student organization at UD. According to Nikki Luisi, Greek Week overall co-chairperson, they raised over $2,000 for the organization last year.

"Greek Week brings the social fraternities and sororities together in friendly competition to celebrate our accomplishments," Luisi said. "The entire Greek community has multiple reasons to celebrate: the numerous service hours we give back to the Dayton community, the leadership we grow and foster within our chapters and the outlet we provide for many students to build lasting, positive relationships are but just a few."

Visit www.udgreekweek.com for more information.

SPEAKER COMES TO CAMPUS TO DISCUSS RAPES, ABORTIONS

MEAGAN MARION
Staff Writer

Imagine that your mother almost aborted you. Twice.

Rebecca Kiessling, a child conceived in rape, nearly missed out on her chance at life when her mother almost went through with two back-alley abortions.

"I just barely made it," Kiessling said in the Heritage House '76 pamphlet Conceived in Rape: A Story of Hope. "But I've learned that my value is not based on how I was conceived, who raised me, what other people think of my life, or even what I do with my life."

The UD Students for Life and Dayton Right to Life sponsored Kiessling to share her story on Wednesday in the Kennedy Union Boll Theater.

"We are a service club here on campus whose main goal is to continue to spread the awareness of the value and sanctity of human life," sophomore and co-president Karl Eckberg said. "We as a club have decided to try and bring in speakers for our community during the year in order to put a face to the issues and continue to raise awareness."

When asked why she decided to come speak at UD, Kiessling simply replied, "I was invited."

She "brings a message of hope," Eckberg said.

With the election right around the corner, important issues such as abortion should be talked about and thought over, Kiessling said.

"People are very ignorant," Kiessling said. "Most people don't know someone who was conceived in rape, they've never talked to a mother who has been raped and had a child or even had an abortion, yet certain people are ready to make policies on things they're ignorant about."

Kiessling is a mother of five. Her first two children were adopted and saved from abortion. She is a family law attorney who represents women coerced into abortion, according to her pamphlet.

Her story is one of compassion and hope, but also of awareness. She wants to ensure that people hear her story and think twice about abortion. She does not push the religious view of the issue as much as she does the philosophical view, Kiessling said.

"I'll talk about what I've dealt with as an attorney and I'll take the philosophical arguments head on," Kiessling said. "I'm part of an online support group and so many people that are part of it feel stigmatized and devalued by society. I've always been strong and outspoken so how could I not speak up?"

She has been an anti-abortion and adoption speaker since 1995 and has appeared on CBS News, "Good Morning America" and CNN's "Talk Back Live." She has been named one of the "Remarkable Pro-Life Women" by Feminists for Life.

"I'm alive today because abortion was illegal in Michigan and people defended my life even though they didn't even know me," Kiessling said. "How could I not pay it forward?"

Craving kugel for the high holidays and can't make it to family this new year?

A local family can "adopt" you. Families from all movements of Judaism are inviting college students or faculty to be their guests for meals and/or high holiday services. Contact Meryl Hattenbach at the Dayton Jewish Community Center at 937-853-0372 or mhattenbach@jfgd.net for more info.

RECPLEX OFFERS REFEREEING, FITNESS CERTIFICATION

ALLISON DUNN

Staff Writer

There's more to the University of Dayton's RecPlex than just exercising and health benefits.

The RecPlex will hold Ohio High School Athletic Association training for basketball certification classes starting Sept. 28. To be certified by the OHSAA, students must complete a total of 30 hours, spending 25 in the classroom and five hours on the practice courts.

"We have a governing set of rules that we have to follow. We teach them the rules of the game and the mechanics, where to stand and what to look for," said Mark Hoying, assistant director of intramurals and instructor of the course.

"Mark was great," senior Jim Gazzale said. "He prepared me for every situation."

All students must pass a final exam to be certified to referee high school basketball.

"So much of your success in officiating is gaining experience," senior Nick Iannarino said. "I think getting certified is the best way for you to start getting more and more games of increasing difficulty and intensity under your belt.

"There's really not a better hands-on way to gain experience and, maybe more importantly at this stage in your career, confidence," Iannarino said.

Typically, students earn $50 for refereeing a junior high double-header basketball game. For a high school varsity game, students earn approximately $60. Certified refs receive $8 an hour.

"It has been a lot of fun. It's definitely a learning experience. [I] work in different situations, it keeps you in shape, and it keeps you thinking," Gazzale said.

The program is open to students and non-students. There is a $75 fee for students and $100 for non-student adults. There will be nine classes held over seven consecutive Sunday and Wednesday evenings.

Students may also be certified to referee intramurals, which only requires six hours of training. For more information, contact Mark Hoying at 229-2712.

The RecPlex will also host workshops to become a personal trainer Nov. 14 through 16. This program is open to students and non-students.

"It is a lifelong [experience]. You can build upon it, exploring different exercises," said Turbo-kick instructor Brittany Yoder.

Students may concentrate in Group Fitness, Personal Fitness, Hip-Hop Hustle, Turbo Kick, Spinning, and Piyo, a combination of pilates and yoga. Guest instructors will teach the workshops.

"Students are welcome to work here," Clare Glaser, assistant director for fitness, said. "They must go through an audition and interview process. It's nice because it's held right here."

According to Glaser, certified instructors at the RecPlex earn $12 an hour.

The workshop fee is $469. Students receive a 35 percent discount. However, there is no discount for the group fitness program.

For more information, contact Clare Glaser at 229-2705.

Crime Log

The following incidents were reported to the department of Public Safety on Sept. 7 to Sept. 12. This log was compiled by Flyer News from actual police reports obtained from the Department of Public Safety.

Criminal Damaging
Sept. 7, 3:03 p.m.

Officer Parmenter was dispatched to the S1 parking lot on the report of a broken rear window on a vehicle on Sept. 7 at 3:03 p.m. Upon arrival, the complainant, a UD law student, said she parked her car around 2:15 p.m. and returned at 3 p.m. When she returned, she noticed her rear window had been shattered. The officer couldn't locate anything around the vehicle that would have caused the damage.

Theft
Sept. 8, 5:42 p.m.

Officer Barber was dispatched to Flyer Spirit at University Place. He spoke with the store manager. A male asked if he could exchange crumpled up cash for new $20 bills. The manager gave him the new bills but found the crumpled money was $2 short. The suspect returned a sealed envelope containing the fresh bills so he could get more cash. Further investigation showed the envelope contained fake money.

Criminal Damaging
Sept. 12, 1:25 p.m.

Officer Rohrer was dispatched to a residence on Brown St on the report of criminal damaging on Sept 12 at 1:25 p.m. Upon arrival, Rohrer met with a complainant who said an unknown suspect had thrown a piece of concrete through the kitchen window. The officer noted there were shards of glass on the counter and floor and the concrete piece was on the floor.

long vacation with trips to Disney World, Sea World and Universal Studios, according to Wasik, who serves as the D4D fundraising chair.

"I think it was awesome that we got to meet the family before the race," junior Jackie Cooney said. "It focused on why we're really doing it."

This school year marks D4D's second official year on campus, according to Wasik. Their motto is "The most fun you can run on campus," and they combine running with service. It's made up of 50 students and is under the leadership of seniors Pat Tassone, Stephanie Ricker and faculty adviser Brad Balsler.

The 5K is their first big fundraiser of the year. Junior Michelle Stawicki, the training chair on D4D's executive board, explained that this marathon is a step closer to reaching the organization's goal of raising $8,000.

"It's good for charity, good for kids; it's just good to help out," race-winner Billy Przybala said, dressed as Batman.

Art Street Cafe, The Chill, The Galley, UD Dining Services, Vitamin Water, DayAir and The Bagel Café provided free food and drinks. An awards ceremony and raffle prizes followed.

The majority of D4D's members are also training to run in the Goofy Challenge, a half or full marathon, in Disney World in January 2009.

"The best part is that the D4D runners and the family are in Florida supporting one another at the same time," Stawicki said.

D4D will be hosting other fundraising events throughout the semester, including a Mickey Mouse Pancake Breakfast the Sunday of Parents' Weekend and a Disney Karaoke Pub Night in November.

"We try to integrate Marianist values by incorporating student lives and the dreams of a child with a life threatening disorder," Wasik said. "Our goal is to raise awareness that every individual can be empowered to change lives one mile at a time."

Turn your blackout playlist into cash

NICK IANNARINO
A&E Assistant Editor

Without power to blast booming stereos or recharge iPods, upperclassmen living in student neighborhoods were forced to get a little creative last week.

They played their own music... in the dark.

Inspired by students strumming guitars and singing on their front porches, Sister Annette Schmeling, vice president for student development and Dean of Students, developed a contest encouraging students to create a music playlist that best emulates their experiences during the Sept. 15 windstorm, subsequent blackout and all-night fire alarm buzzing sessions.

"No Power Play" is open to the approximately 2,400 upperclassmen who live in university-owned homes and apartments that were affected by power outages. The weeklong contest began Monday, Sept. 22.

"What song did you listen to when your fire alarm wouldn't shut off?" the "No Power Play" Web site asks. "What was the last song that played in iTunes before your computer battery died?"

A panel of students and staff from the Student Development and Residence Education departments will award the most "thoughtful" playlists with prizes in both group and individual categories. The best individual entry will be awarded with an 8GB iPod Touch, while the winning household can walk away with $300 worth of groceries. Second place receives a $20 gift card to iTunes.

"The contest is just one more way this campus has rallied this week," Schmeling said in a recent press release. "The students have pulled together and supported one another in such an admirable way."

Students must submit a playlist of 10 clean versions of songs available on iTunes. No original music, remixes or vulgar lyrics will be accepted. The list of songs must be e-mailed to nopowerplay@u Dayton.edu. Names, addresses and specification of whether the entry is individual or group is required.

"You're hard pressed to find a student who doesn't have an iPod full of songs," senior Kevin Schultz said in the press release. "If it takes a student 10 minutes to put together a playlist and, in return, get $300 worth of groceries, why not?"

For more information, visit nopowerplay.udayton.edu or call the Student Involvement and Leadership Office at 937-229-4114.

Cut paper artist to hold workshop

CHRIS RIZER
Staff Writer

At a show in Toledo, artist Mary Gaynier observed two older women viewing her work. They did not realize that Gaynier was the artist, so they went on talking naturally about the piece — one viewer skeptically glancing at the other, asking what's so great about a doily mounted on black paper, Gaynier said.

Then one of the ladies leaned in to get a closer look at the artwork. Abruptly, she exclaimed to her friend, "oh my God — something is going on in this," Gaynier said.

This is the general reaction Mary Gaynier receives about her art, she said on the phone from her Toledo home.

Gaynier said she wants viewers to think that her artwork is nothing more than a doily at first, but then look closer and notice that there are many tiny cuts in the paper that make up an intricate drawing.

Gaynier's cut paper art pieces each tell their own story. One of her pieces represents the oval office. Titled "My fellow Americans," it depicts President Bush as he would be while addressing the country.

Standing in the background is the figure of Dick Cheney, whose expression reads "What are you doing?" Gaynier said.

"She has quite a sense of humor as you can see," Susan Byrnes, director of Artstreet, said.

Gaynier's exhibit, "The Amazing Cut Paper Art," is on display in the Marianist Hall Learning Center until Dec. 5.

As a cut paper artist, making one of these artworks is similar to that of making paper snowflakes. This similar process is what led Gaynier to "the art of Scherensnitte, or paper cutting," according to womenscenter.utoledo.edu.

A self-proclaimed "obsessive decorator," Gaynier decided to decorate her basement with paper snowflakes for a Christmas gathering one year, which led to the discovery of a hidden talent. Using an Exacto knife, Gaynier folds each piece of paper eight times, and with great attention to detail, draws and cuts elaborate pictures.

This is the process that Gaynier will explain at ArtStreet on Wednesday after her Artist Reception in Marianist Hall Learning Space from 6 to 7 p.m.

For such creative subject matter, it makes one wonder what is Gaynier's inspiration. She said that it comes from things in everyday life, like the media and everyday experiences. One such source of inspiration was the new human resources director at one of her past jobs, in which she worked with a large number of union employees.

"Union people are hard to fire," Gaynier said, but then the new HR director arrived and started firing people, the director quickly earned the nickname "The Black Widow."

Gaynier made a cut paper piece called Reign of the Black Widow, depicting a giant spider attacking a group of tiny people, symbolizing the power of the HR director over the company's union workers.

Not only did the director know about her nickname, but Gaynier's artwork was displayed in an exhibition across from where she worked.

"We had a tongue-in-cheek relationship," Gaynier said, so there were no hard feelings.

Gaynier says that there will be "something for everyone," at her paper cutting class on Wednesday at 7:15 p.m. in ArtStreet Studio D — for people of all skill levels and ages.

BRIANA SNYDER/PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR

"The Amazing Cut Paper Art" of Toledo artist Mary Gaynier is on display at Marainst Learning Center this semester. Gaynier will be hosting a workshop Wednesday at 7:15 p.m. in ArtStreet Studio D, following an artist reception in Marianst at 6 p.m.

Dress to impress potential employers

AMANDA LEECH
Staff Writer

You only have 27 seconds to make the first impression, according to www.allbusiness.com.

With career fair this week, many students will be scrambling to find their business professional attire. It is important to find the perfect outfit to make the right impression on potential employers. The outfit that a person chooses can potentially say a lot to a prospective employer.

A recent survey indicated approximately 40 percent of all employment rejections are based on personal presentation, including dress and grooming, according to careers.udayton.edu. The site also suggests to dress on the conservative side and stay away from showing off the latest fashion trends or fads.

Women have many choices when it comes to finding the perfect job interview outfit. The problem arises when trying to narrow the choice.

Here are a few simple tips that www.collegegrad.com suggests when choosing the perfect outfit:

- No dresses. A conservative color jacket with a skirt or slacks looks much more professional.

- If you wear nail polish, it should be clear or a conservative color. Nude colors are always classy and stylish.

- No more than one ring should be worn on each hand. The focus should not be on accessories, it should be on your resume and job skills. This rule also applies to earrings. Those with more than one piercing should wear only one set of earrings and remove all other body piercings.

- No purses — a briefcase should be carried instead. For those without a briefcase, try a structured dark colored bag, and keep it organized. Nothing looks more unprofessional than digging around in your purse for something while trying to carry on a conversation.

- Wear shoes that have a conservative heel. You will not look professional if you cannot walk in your own shoes.

Men also have many choices when it comes to dressing for an interview. As with girls, there are a few guidelines that should be followed for dressing professionally.

- A conservative two-piece suit should be worn. Solid colors like dark blue, grey, and black are best.

- When choosing a necktie, look for silk in a conservative color or pattern. As with women's accessories, you want the attention to be on you and what you are telling your interviewer, not what you are wearing.

- Short hair and a fresh shave are always better and more professional looking than long hair and a beard.

- No earrings should be worn, and rings should be limited to a wedding ring or college ring.

Other than dress, here are a few last tips for making the best possible first impression. No gum or candy should be in your mouth during the interview. If you are worried about your breath, it would be better to brush your teeth before the interview.

Minimal cologne and perfume should be worn, as many people are allergic to certain scents. Pockets should be emptied, so there is no change jingling when you walk.

A well-groomed hairstyle will also enhance your look for the best first impression. Although bangs are popular for women this season, they should be swept back from the face so that you are not constantly fussing with your hair when you talk.

The fall career fair is Tuesday, Sept. 24 to Thursday, Sept. 26. Now with these tips you can dress to impress and land your next job with style.

Changes:

Campus continues to evolve as upgrades are made everywhere

The University of Dayton has gone through a lot of changes in the past few years. When the Class of 2009 entered UD, campus was a completely different place. First, and probably most noticeable, is that the Recplex was not yet complete. Students still had to work out at the PAC, which can't even be compared to our new facility. Another big change over past years is what has been done to Marycrest. Following the 2005-2006 school year, renovations began that eventually transformed the residence hall from the typical run-down college dorm rooms into a hotel complete with a beautiful restaurant in the bottom. Anyone who lived or ate in Marycrest before these changes realizes how lucky those living there right now are.

Other residence halls on campus have also seen a great deal of change. Marianist Hall, which used to house freshmen and sophomores, is now exclusively for sophomores as the number of students at UD continues to increase. VWK's dining hall, which used to be all-you-can-eat, is now in line with KU and Marycrest as students pay by the item. These renovations would make it difficult for someone who went to school here five years ago to recognize what building they were in on a visit to campus, which makes one wonder what things will things look like five years from now?

Most of us have heard about UD's master plan involving the NCR land and how there will be new dorms, a new library, and a new student union in the future. But what else will change on campus? What buildings will we not recognize from the inside in a few years? What will become of the closets we called rooms in Founders? There are already plans to renovate Stuart following this school year, and academic buildings such as Kettering Labs and St. Joe's have been significantly upgraded.

These are just some of the changes that we know about and have significantly improved life at UD. These are exciting times as the campus continues to change and five or 10 years from now, if we come back to UD, it may no longer be recognizable as the school we graduated from. One thing is for sure, this change is just going to keep making an already great school even better.

Going crazy

NICK IANNARINO SENIOR

The storm struck the big yellow house on Woodland Avenue with great vengeance and furious anger. Plastic bags tore through the streets like tumbleweeds on steroids. Tree limbs ripped violently from their trunks. Hundreds of disillusioned X-Festers wandered aimlessly along Brown Street, given yet another reason to hate the world, Mohawks, spiked necklaces and black eye liner unable to protect them from the howling remnants of Hurricane Ike. I was bounced around my front porch with the unpredictability of a Charles Little free throw, struggling to see through the flecks of dust assaulting my eyes. Then came the darkness...

Hour 1: I am alive, but there's no telling for how long. I stumble about my house, a foreigner in a foreign land. Desperately, I rush to check my Facebook page: "The page cannot be displayed." My knees buckle — panic sets in. How will I know who I truly am without Google Alerts? I am stranded in a desolate wasteland, isolated from glorious videos of sneezing pandas and pictures of Britney's lady junk. Five minutes later, my laptop battery dies. Too much activity over a 10 minute span. I bury it in our backyard beneath our inflatable pool. Depression follows. Curse the day Tangent graced this campus with such remarkable technology!

Hour 8: Blinded by rage, I purchase a can of gasoline and ignite a torch consisting of an old T-shirt and a pitching wedge. I arrive at the Powerhouse after midnight, the taste of vengeance sweet. They will pay for stealing my electricity. Someone tells me that the Powerhouse functions only to provide students with ID cards. I burn it anyway.

Hour 24: Great success! I find water by digging into damp soil and allowing the muddy liquid to settle and become clear. I then realize that fresh drinking water is not an issue during a power outage. I fill up a big jug with tap water and taunt the poor saps over at Campus South by slowly and tantalizingly pouring it on the lawn.

Hour 50: Running out of food. Considering eating at Taco Bell. I welcome death... or cannibalism. John's thigh meat would be moist and tender...

Hour 62: Finally understand the irony of the Darkside being out of power.

Hour 89: I have been falling asleep the second the sun sets and waking slightly before it rises. My nourishment consists primarily of 6 a.m. breakfasts at Bob Evans, enjoyed slowly before morning mass. I fear that I am aging rapidly into an elderly man. I shudder.

Hour 116: In my desperation, I craft a last-second plan to concoct my own version of BW3's Electric Lemonade and sprinkle it throughout campus in the hope that it generates power. Perhaps if I drink enough, I will become electric myself, and can restore power with my magical conductive touch...

More food options needed around UD

I really enjoy food. I also enjoy

JASON LYON OPINIONS EDITOR

though, because late at night what I really crave is some food.

In terms of food after midnight around campus, we basically have two options: pizza from Dominos and pizza from Cousin Vinny's. This is getting old very quickly. Go to a school such as Penn State, OSU, OU, Pitt, or Kentucky for the weekend, and you will be greeted with 24-hour restaurants where you can drown yourself in greasy breakfast food or a giant bucket of cheese fries. To me, this is the definition of college; drinking, and then eating things that clog arteries. The only option we have in this department is Denny's, which is all the way down on Main Street and quite frankly, isn't good even after a long night out.

The beautiful property on Brown Street remains empty. It could be a Steak 'n' Shake, Waffle House, Eat 'n' Park (it's a Pittsburgh thing), or some kind of original restaurant unique to UD.

This would be a huge draw for university students and would still be used when we are all completely sober. I guess I can understand if the administration doesn't want more bars around campus, we are all going to find our ways to drink regardless of that. But being able to eat the unhealthiest of foods in the middle of the night is something we shouldn't be deprived of. I am pretty sure that is a God-given right of all college students.

bars. I enjoy them even more when it's around 1 a.m. on a Saturday. Late night food and bars are a staple of every college student's life, and ones that we all take very seriously. That is why I do not like the area surrounding UD's campus, namely Brown Street.

Since my freshman year, Brown Street has certainly been improved, with the additions of great places such as Potbelly, Dairy Queen, and Subway. Notice, though, that none of these are bars. I love Flanny's, the Fieldhouse, Milanos and B Dub's as much as everyone else, but it would be nice to get some new options around campus to spice up the weekends a little bit.

A quick side note — Tim's is horrible. It is quite possibly the dirtiest and least fun place in the world and should be demolished.

Anyway, there is a need for new options on campus. Not necessarily a bar, but possibly something like Friday's. It's a place to go eat, drink, and watch some games, and would help disperse business from the others bars so maybe it doesn't take 20 minutes to get a new beer. Bars aren't the most important thing here

Our markets are in trouble

Besides the devastation caused by Hurricane Ike, one of the biggest news stories going around is the collapse of Lehman Brothers, one of Wall Street's oldest and most powerful firms.

The news of the bankruptcy of the company caused the DOW to plummet 500 points, its worst showing since 9/11.

Lehman Brothers is yet another victim of the subprime mortgage meltdown. The officers of the company, like those of many other banks and financial institutions, in very simple terms, either lent money for homes to people who were not credit worthy or securitized these loans. As soon as tough economic times hit, the people defaulted on their mortgages, causing these banks to post huge losses.

You will hear many say that the financial meltdown created by the subprime mortgage mess is caused by greed.

I agree with this, although I believe that the government has actually enabled this behavior to occur.

There is a situation known as "moral hazard," in which an entity embarks on a course of action, however risky it may be, in the belief that no matter what happens something will come to its rescue. Essentially, the entity is not exposed to the full risk of a given situation.

I think it is very possible that moral hazard is the great cause behind our country's current financial problems. These institutions felt that they could take on loans that they would never have taken on in the absence of a possible (or in their minds, guaranteed) government buyout.

letters to the editor

QUALITY OF KU'S DINING HALL HAS GONE DOWN

I want to start out by saying what I am about to write was sparked by the generosity of UD's "Emergency free food" that was three times a day during the "I survived the blackout week."

As I am writing this I am staring at a "taco salad." Now the reason I put taco salad in quotation is, because in no way shape or form is this a taco salad.

I was in a hurry to get home to get started on work so I ran into KU to grab a much needed taco salad. I know it's not taco Tuesday, but I was craving one. When I went up to the window I looked down at the ingredients that were available to make a mouth watering meal. I almost walked away.

The normal buffet of options that existed last year for taco salads or nachos was almost gone. I had the option of shredded beef or shredded beef. Sorry I don't eat shredded beef on taco salads. It's fine if you like shredded beef, but what happened to the option of ground beef or shredded chicken?

There wasn't even melted taco cheese; it was a mix of different shredded cheeses. Next there was a bean mixture that looked like something that had been sitting around for a few hours with a strange film on top. So as I am in a hurry I took a look at what else was offered. The lunch for this day was boneless chicken wings. Everyone loves chicken wings, but who likes chicken wings and mashed potatoes together and to top it off in small print it said, "no gravy today." I am sorry but mashed potatoes with no gravy and with wings? What is going on? I got a wrap the other day that as soon as I opened the wrapping it completely came apart and there were hardly any ingredients inside of it and I paid $4.00 for it.

Now the reason I say that UD is responsible for this attempt to make KU better is because during the emergency meals I made the walk from the Ghetto to Marycrest. Wow am I jealous of those freshmen that don't even know what the Crest use to be like.

Now I don't want KU to be replaced like the Crestaraunt, but can we at least get food matchups that make sense? Can we get the options back that make the food good and most of all, can the food be prepared better? I feel that things are just being thrown together and KU has lost its touch.

Everyone in the KU dining room needs to take a few lessons from Cheryl, she takes pride and makes sure that everyone gets what they need and the reason every junior through fifth-year leaves KU smiling.

Volleyball

Flyers win two of three at 'Classic'

BRYCE STUCKENSCHNEIDER
Chief Staff Writer

The Flyer volleyball team faced arguably their toughest opponents of the season this weekend at the Frericks Center. UD hosted the Dayton Flyer Classic, featuring Purdue, Miami University (OH) and Louisville. The tournament, perhaps the most important of the season for the Flyers, was stacked with tough competition.

All three opposing teams have had impressive seasons thus far. Purdue came into the tournament ranked No. 20 in the country. Miami has also had an impressive season, earlier knocking off 10th ranked Wisconsin. Finally, Louisville is projected to win the Big East this season.

The tournament not only featured regional rivals, but teams that have had competitive matches in the past. Both the Boilermakers and the RedHawks were hoping to avenge losses to Flyers last season. Last season, UD's win over Purdue was the victory that put the Flyers on the national stage for the first time.

The Classic started Friday night with Purdue (9-1 entering the tournament) narrowly edging out the Flyers 3-2. Senior Nicole Bateman lead the way for the Flyers with 13 kills and 10 digs in her fifth double-double of the season. Valerie Akerhielm aided the effort, racking up 14 digs in the match.

Coach Sheffield said the match was more about survival than anything else. There was just a feeling in the Frericks Center that this was going to be a close one. The slugfest fueled the Flyers into their Saturday morning match versus the RedHawks from Miami.

Coach Sheffield's team snapped their short two-game losing streak against the 6-3 Miami RedHawks, dominating the competition 3-0.

The Flyers dominated every aspect of the game as sophomore Lindsay Fletemier (15 kills, 6 blocks) and senior Bethany Akerhielm (8 kills) dictated the match for the Flyers against their regional rivals. Fletemier recorded an impressive .565 attack percentage in the match. Erin Schroeder continued dishing out assists, recording 33 assists in the match, following her 44 assists the previous night against Purdue.

Riding the momentum from Saturday morning's win, the Flyers won a five-set nail-biter versus Louisville later that evening. After capturing the first two games (25-21, 25-23), UD lost two straight games to the Cardinals. The fifth and final set was taken by the Flyers 18-16. The electricity in the Frericks Center, unlike most places on campus this week, was tangible as Nicole Bateman notched a career-high 23 kills versus Louisville.

The win was especially big for Bateman, a senior who transferred from Louisville after her freshman year. The match was Bateman's sixth double-double of the year and couldn't have come at a more crucial time. Erin Schroeder supported the cause, notching 55 assists in the match.

Bateman and Bethany Akerhielm were awarded all-tournament honors after the conclusion of the tournament Saturday night.

UD Volleyball returns to the court next Friday at 5 p.m. in a match against Long Island University in the UAlbany Invitational in Albany, N.Y.

The UAlbany Invitational will be the fifth and final regular season tournament event that the Flyers will participate in this season.

The team will play in three games during the two-day tournament. Dayton will start off against Long Island on Friday evening, then face Yale and Albany on Saturday.

Following the tournament, the team will start their conference play with a game at George Washington on Oct. 3.

Runners take second and fifth in South Bend

Dayton women and men both fare well at National Catholic Invite, Women defeat all A-10 competitors in field of 35 teams

BRENDAN HADER
Staff Writer

The University of Dayton women's and men's cross country teams had strong performances, finishing second and fifth respectively at the National Catholic Invitational at Notre Dame on Friday.

The women's team finished second out of 35 schools in the 5K race behind host school Notre Dame, making it back-to-back race finishes as the runner-up, while the Irish won the event for the seventh straight time. The team also took second place at the Queen City Invitational in West Chester Sept. 6.

"Our team had one main goal going into the race," senior runner Ellen Nienhaus said. "We were hoping to beat all of the Atlantic 10 teams that were in the race which we were able to do."

The other A-10 teams in the field included Xavier, Saint Louis, Duquesne, Saint Joseph's and St. Bonaventure. Going into the race, the women's team was much more concerned with these teams than with Notre Dame.

"We are focused on the teams that we will be facing all season," Nienhaus said. "The results against those teams are what will matter at the end of the season."

Sophomore Maureen Bulgrin led the team with an eighth place finish. Bulgrin crossed the finish line with a time of 18:21, the 25th best time for a 5K in UD history. Liz Coorey, another sophomore, finished with a personal best time of 18:30 placing her 12th overall and second on the team for the race.

Freshman Elissa Mason ran her fastest time of the season thus far ending the race 20th overall at 18:45. Brigitte Sherman, a sophomore, took 28th place overall with a time of 18:58.

The women's team has a weekend off before heading to their next race, the Greater Louisville Classic in Kentucky on Oct. 4.

The men's team also had an impressive showing, finishing fifth out of 33 schools in their 8K race, which was the first race of that length for them this year. The event was paced by the Flyers' conference foe Duquesne, who took the championship.

The men's team was paced by redshirt junior and last year's individual title winner Mike Andersen who finished fifth overall with a time of 25:13.

Finishing just behind Andersen were sophomores Matt and Chris Lemon, who finished in eighth and 12th place respectively. Matt crossed the finish line with a time of 25:22 and Chris with a time of 25:39.

Finishing the race 43rd overall for the men was sophomore Cory McGoldrick with a time of 26:39. Taking 53rd with a time of 26:54 was redshirt senior Billy Przybyla.

The men's team will now gear up for its next event, the Roy Griak Invitational in St. Paul, Minn. on Sept. 27.

Both teams will look to carry the success from this weekend throughout the rest of the fall season.

TOURNAMENT PROVES TO BE SUCCESS

Flyers' second annual Dayton Flyer Marriott Invitational brings Butler, Marshall and RMU into town for weekend matches

JOHN BEDELL

Asst. Sports Editor

Like most coaches and managers in sports, men's soccer head coach Dennis Currier takes a one-game-at-a-time approach to the season. But for the games this past weekend he was forced to look ahead. Way ahead — 12 months to be exact. But when you organize and host a four-team weekend tournament, looking ahead a year in advance is necessary.

The men's soccer team hosted the second annual Dayton Flyer Marriott Invitational this past weekend when they welcomed the Butler Bulldogs, Marshall Thundering Herd and Robert Morris Colonials to Baujan Field for a four-game tournament.

Planning the tournament was no cakewalk for Currier and his staff, as much more goes into organizing a four-team tournament than the average fan might realize.

"The setup comes about a year prior [to the event] and we try and attract some teams that we feel will be competitive," Currier said. "Then once the tournament kicks in we work with our staff to make sure that it's the best experience for everybody."

Currier added that having a top-notch facility in Baujan Field is one selling point that attracts many teams to tournaments hosted by the Flyers.

"We want to be able to attract teams to our tournament each year," Currier said. "We know that Baujan is a great venue but we also have to add in some other things to make sure that the teams enjoy themselves."

Making sure that the teams enjoy themselves is no small task either. Currier said this includes everything from making sure that teams receive the right lodging, meals and tournament gifts.

So how did Currier and his staff come to settle on the four teams playing this weekend? There were a few reasons.

"Well some of it is location. Us and Butler have a good relationship and they've always enjoyed coming down to the tournament," Currier said. "Marshall has been here before as well. And then we wanted to get a new team to come in for this weekend and Robert Morris expressed some interest and we we're happy to accept them."

This tournament was important for the Flyers because it helped them prepare for the Atlantic 10 conference season, tournament and a possible NCAA Tournament bid.

"It helps because you're playing for something," Currier said. "In any tournament you're playing two games within a weekend and once you get into the A-10 tournament, you are dealing with the same format. You have to play a couple games within a few days. We use it as a builder for tournament play. I think the guys know that we want to try and win a championship and this is a great way to get used to that."

Currier said that getting two wins this weekend would help his teams' resume when selection for the NCAA tournament rolls around.

"You have two ways to get into the tournament," Currier said. "You have an at-large bid or you can win the conference. I think we are still a long way away from an at-large bid because there's still a lot of soccer to be played."

However, the team definitely looked sharp throughout the Invitational.

In the team's first game on Friday, the Flyers defeated Marshall (0-6) by a score of 1-0.

The Flyer defense dominated the game, keeping the ball on the Marshall side of the field for most of the game and allowing Marshall just two shots on goal, both of which were saved by Tyler Picard.

The Flyers' lone goal was scored by senior forward Florian DeCamps in the 58th minute to notch his first career game-winner.

In the second game for Dayton, the Flyers outmatched Robert Morris, 5-0.

The five goals were a season-high, and the Flyers scored early and often.

In the sixth minute, DeCamps scored his second goal of the Invitational to give the Flyers a 1-0 lead.

Twelve minutes later in the 24th minute, sophomore defender Tommy Watkins headed in a corner kick from senior midfielder Joe Olwig to up the score to 2-0.

And the goals kept on coming.

Junior midfielder Isaac Kissi scored his third goal of the season on an assist from junior defender Randy Dennis and sophomore midfielder Josh Albers in the 36th minute to give the Flyers a 3-0 halftime lead.

The Flyers then added two more goals in the second half for the victory.

Albers scored his first goal of the season in the 72nd minute on an assist from freshman defender Jack Pearson.

DeCamps scored again in the 78th minute to net his fourth goal on the year, and his third of the tournament.

Robert Morris fell to 1-6-1 for the year.

The Flyers moved to 5-2-1 on the season and will next face SIU-Edwardsville at Baujan Field on Friday at 7 p.m. The game will be the last before the Flyers play their conference opener against Richmond Oct. 10.

Dayton and Butler both went 2-0 in the tournament, while Robert Morris and Marshall both dropped both of their contests.

The event as a whole drew over 1,000 fans between the four games played, and linked up teams from four different states — Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania.
