FRIDAY, APRIL 14: UNIVERSITY OF DAYTON STUDENTS CELEBRATE EARTH DAY

Morgan Leyh, college action campaign coordinator for People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA), will headline an afternoon of education and activities in celebration of Earth Day at the University of Dayton.

Sponsored by UD's Earth Club, Earth Fest will be held from noon to 6 p.m. Friday, April 14, at the Kennedy Union field (located between Kennedy Union and the tennis courts).

Leyh, known for staging the first protests against Spain's "running of the bulls" in Pamplona, is currently on a national lecture tour of college campuses on behalf of the Virginia-based animal rights organization. She'll address students and visitors at 3 p.m., with time for individual questions afterward.

Live music will be provided by "No Vacancies" from 3:30 to 6 p.m., and veggie burgers and lemonade will be served all afternoon. Earth Club student coordinator Liza Fornaciari said representatives from eight environmentally focused, nonprofit organizations will be on hand to distribute educational information and answer questions.
