

Living Hope

After beating coronavirus, 101 years old, Friedman started looking for some yarn so she could knit

After giving birth to a girl, she boarded a ship bringing immigrants to New York City, the great influenza of 1918

I AM 101 YEARS OLD AND I BEAT COVID-19

Spain imposes strict measures making it impossible to see

Maria Branyas celebrates her 113th birthday on March 4, 2020

Branyas, 113, is among the oldest survivors of coronavirus in the world.

"Makhtiar Ahmed, a 106-year-old Delhi resident, has recovered from Covid-19 and is possibly one of India's oldest to have come out of the virus mess"

Ahmed tells us during this crisis: "Be strong and have faith in God and yourself"

"In his own words, Ahmed had fought off Covid-19 with a firm resolve and faith in the almighty."

"The family was quarantined" when the neighbors' young son died of the flu pandemic in 1918 and officials attached signs to the door of their house

"Isn't that beautiful?" Anita says to Joe. "I think we've been reminiscing long enough. I think it's time for our nap."

"She would just go out into the streets and help people who were just lying there"

"The flu was a rapid killer and made the adults of the neighborhood have a little impression on her"

Joe Newman, 101, hugs his fiancée, Anita, who recently celebrated her 100th birthday over Zoom.

Myrtle Hooper, now 107, is in coronavirus lockdown in an aged care home. "I'll simply God bless you leave Him the rest."

"She remembered standing at her bedroom window and seeing this little coffin carrying her baby sister being put into a carriage and being taken away."

Hilda Churchill, a 108-year-old woman, survived the 1918 Spanish Flu, is oldest victim of coronavirus. "She remembers everyone getting it and her mother trying to look after them and her father collapsing in a street and having to be carried home. She was saying how amazing it is that something you can't see can be so devastating."

