Ben O. Stoner, prominent Democrat of Cincinnati, will give the keynote address at the second annual convention of the Council on Consumer Information to be held at the YMCA Thursday through Saturday.

According to Harry C. Murphy, assistant professor of business administration at the University of Dayton and local chairman for the convention, Mr. Stoner will be joined by a prominent Republican for the address.

Mr. Stoner, former district director of the Office of Price Stabilization, is a member of the Good Government League of Cincinnati and the Board of Regents of Chase Law School. He is an insurance counselor and a chartered life underwriter.

"Issues Facing the Consumer in a Political Year" will be the theme of the convention which will open at 8 p.m. Thursday with Mr. Stoner's address and conclude at 12 noon Saturday.

Some 40 of the nation's experts on consumer information and education will take part.

The public is invited to attend the convention sessions.
