MESSAGE FROM THE DEAN

Having worked in the University Libraries for more than 23 years, I take pride in many things, among which are the following:

- In consultation with our colleagues across campus, we acquire the best literature and tools to help a world-class faculty and a vibrant, curious and imaginative student body to pursue greater knowledge.
- We provide the spaces, services and expertise to help students at all levels to learn and succeed.
- And, as a faculty, we create and share new knowledge through a variety of scholarly and popular media — from journals and books to conference papers, posters, workshops, presentations and blogs.

This year’s scholarship report gives tangible evidence of all of these points of pride. In integrating the disciplines we serve into our research in library and information sciences, we contribute to new and better ways to advance research. In assessing and analyzing our services, collaborating with others and sharing what we’ve learned, we provide both data and qualitative understanding that can lead to better services and more effective learning. In sharing our expertise, we are not only elevating the University of Dayton’s research profile, but also encouraging the study of librarianship, information science, Mariology, classics, communications and more.

Even better: Some of the research contained in this scholarship report is contributing to our strategic planning for our facilities, services and collections.

I am pleased to work with such an accomplished and collegial group of faculty.
