Holy Week and the celebration of the Great Paschal Triduum are upon us. One of the ways we know this is that the sun has crossed the equator—or so it appears to us—and the moon is full, our astronomical method for dating Easter each year. Even this can teach us that what we are doing has far-reaching consequences: "let all corners of the earth be glad, knowing an end to gloom and darkness," (from the Paschal Proclamation). What are we doing? In the coming days, many Christians throughout the world will go to Church, a lot, and spend more time there than usual. We will gather around blazing fires and share candlelight. We will sing, worship, and adore, behold the wood of the cross, keep silent vigil, and get our feet washed. Some will be totally soaked in front of assemblies of total strangers.

Why?

Because we are—Alleluia!—Easter people, people of the rolled away stone, and the empty tomb of the Risen One, Jesus Christ! Keeping the holy days and celebrating the Paschal Feast means doing some unusual things and embracing some exceptional behavior because we are grateful. Grateful for Jesus who brought the compassion of the God of heaven down to earth, and who taught us those behaviors that should not be unusual or exceptional among us, like the beatitudes, like feeding the hungry, loving our enemies, praying without ceasing, loving God with our whole being and redefining "them" as neighbor. That's what Easter people do.

Mark 11:1-10 or John 12:12-16
Reading I: Isaiah 50:4-7
Responsorial Ps: 22:7-8, 16-17a, 18-19, 22:23ab
Reading II: Philippians 2:6-11
For Readings of the Triduum please go to: http://usccb.org/

O death, where is your victory? O death, where is your sting? The sting of death is sin, and sin gets it power from the law. But thanks to God who has given us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. I Cor. 15:55-57.
