

Life is complex and full of sadness.

Sacrifices are being made around the world.

And babies grow faster than the speed of light.

Yet, we must train our minds to see that silver lining.

See, right now, in the midst of uncertainty, I try to find that lining.

Suddenly, we are homebound.

No where else should we go.

We are being called to remain diligent, resilient, and responsible, for the common good.

We will recover, but we won't ever be the same.

Take this time to love yourself.

To practice social distancing and remain home.

I will miss your faces —I can't see you from six feet away.

Let's continue our relationship in the cyber world and embrace it.

We will accomplish the rest of the learning outcomes.
