Painted 1528-30, oil on canvas, measuring 43-3/5 x 35-2/5 inches, now in Dresden State Gallery. Work commissioned by the libertine Pietro Aretino which accounts for the picture's sensuality. The rose in the Christ Child's right hand is said to be a symbol of Christ's sacrifice for mankind.

3 riyal (Class 1). CAMPORI MADONNA by Correggio. Original in Estense Gallery, Modena, Italy. Also seen on 1967 Cook Islands Christmas stamp, and on January 27, 1968 issue of Paraguay; see article on pages 26-27 of the March 1, 1968 issue. Stamps not available for illustration.

BULGARIA: A UPI release dated May 19, 1969 states that the Rila Monastery, dedicated to the "Nativity of Mary," has been returned to the Orthodox Church with the naming of Archimandrit Joan, the Vicar of Sofia, as its Abbot. The Monastery has been in government hands since the end of World War II. It is a symbol of Bulgarian nationalism, having survived invasions and five centuries of Ottoman rule. After World War II the government turned it into a national museum; during this period it was completely restored and modern facilities added. The government first spoke of turning the cloister back to the Church during a visit to Bulgaria of Orthodox leader Patriarch Athenagoras I during the fall of 1967. The new Abbot was a monk at the monastery before it was taken over by the government.

THE MARIAN PHILATELIST -52- July 1, 1969
Continuing its program of native art stamps, Jugoslavia issued a 6-stamp set reproducing frescoes painted from the 12th to the 15th centuries in its Medieval Monasteries. Three of the stamps are Marian.

Prior to the middle of the 14th century wall painting in the area then known as Macedonia and Serbia reflected the Byzantine influence and culture. After that, the work shows a definite Slavic influence, dating to the time the Southern Slavs (that is the meaning of Jugoslavia) achieved independence. Byzantine style still had some influence on the artists but at this point they began to draw on local talents and subjects. Most of the wall painting done during this period was in small churches throughout the area.

CRUCIFIXION. The 1,25 dinar value presents the central portion of a fresco dating to 1220 in the Monastery of the Holy Virgin at Studenica. Paintings in this Monastery were done between 1219 and 1235. The work is somewhat Italo-Byzantine in style in that Christ is a "Man of Sorrows" - eyes closed and head to one side, a style similar to the Pisan School. But the Slavic influence is seen in the humanism of the figures and in the background which differs from the pre-ordained formal Byzantine style.

The Sorrowful Mother stands at the left, in abject sorrow, her right hand pointing to her Divine Son crucified on the cross. St. John, also a sorrowful figure, is at the right. The background is full of the heads of cherubs. Angels are seen to the left and right of the crossbar. Beneath the figure "5" of the value, at top right, is the half-body of a Prophet holding a scroll, which probably foretells the event which had just taken place. To the right of St. John may be seen the head of a figure wearing the Eastern-type religious head covering; he has a halo and may be a local or national saint, but thus far has not been identified. The fresco has been partially restored, but the damaged portions still in evidence are reproduced on the stamp.

PIETA DETAIL FROM "THE ENTOMBMENT": The 5,00 dinar value presents a very poignant Pieta, a detail from the fresco of "The Entombment" in the Church of Nerezi, near Skoplja, painted in 1164.

The frescoes in this church rank next to those in St. Sophia Church at Ochrid, and were done under the patronage of the ruling Comneni. It is believed that the artist for these frescoes was brought to Nerezi from Constantinople. They herald the Byzantine Revival or Renaissance period and are distinct in form and content from other 12th century wall paintings.

The design shows the Sorrowful Mother holding the Body of her Divine Son following its deposition from the cross. She has placed her face against His, her right arm encircles His neck, and her left hand is placed on His right arm. This is a sorrowful Mother's last farewell to a Beloved and Divine Son. St. John the Evangelist is at the left but only his head and hands appear on the stamp.

The heads of Christ and the Sorrowful Mother are also seen on a 1941 issue of semi-postals issued by Serbia during German occupation, Scott Nos. 2NB7-2NB10c and 2NB11-2NB14.

MARRIAGE AT CANA: The 2,00 dinar value shows only the bride, groom and best man, however, a very small portion of the Virgin's mantle, seen to the left of the groom's elbow, is included in the design. Including this stamp in our listing is similar to that stamp of the United States, issued in 1893, which shows only the foot of the Virgin in the tapestry at the top of the stamp.

The detail seen on this stamp is from the 14th century fresco in the Monastery at Kalenic.
BULGARIA: ICON ISSUE - April 1969

The Icon is closely linked with the ritual of the Eastern Orthodox Church, and has been sacred in design and purpose. It is highly venerated and the object of many pilgrimages. It has led armies, has been present at court ceremonies, coronations, christenings and at deathbeds. It still stands as a symbol of the Eastern Orthodox Church, and reflects the inspiration of talented artists who worked within the bounderies of sacred art. The wooden Icons, small or large, crude or masterpieces, were revered as symbols of religious and patriotic spirit by a people so often under alien rule. This Bulgaria issue depicts Icons from its cultural heritage now in the National Museum at Sofia, but originally painted for various Monasteries throughout the country. Two of the stamps include the Madonna.

THE VIRGIN AND ST. JOHN THE THEOLOGIAN: The 2 ct. value depicts an Icon painted in 1395 for the Poganov Monastery. This Monastery is now the Archaeological Museum at Sofia. The Icon presents a combination of figures not found on other Icons. It was commissioned by the Byzantine Empress Elena, the wife of Emperor Manuel II Palaeologus (1391-1425), and presented to the Poganov Monastery. The Empress commissioned the Icon after the death of her father, called the Despot Constantine. One source stated that the design was to show the Virgin in the pose designated for a Crucifixion, but in the company of an ancient figure, a stand-in for her father, so St. John the Theologian was chosen. The stance of the figures was to symbolize a "dialogue."

This Icon was the work of an unknown Slav painter with great skill, and was painted in Salonica at that time the center of Slav culture. It is a 2-sided Icon with the "Miracle of Latom" on the reverse, tempera and gold on oak panel, measuring 87 x 62 cm. It was given by the Poganov Monastery to the National Museum in 1920 and was restored in 1952. It has been exhibited in Paris in 1960 and in Essen in 1964, and has been in the National Gallery of Sofia since 1965.

The letters around the Virgin's head are the epithet for "Refuge," and refer to an underground room in the Church of the Virgin Archeiroporetos in Solonica, thought to be the refuge of St. Dimiter and the place where he died. Between the two figures is an inscription which reads: "Eleana, in the Lord Jesus Christ, Faithful Tsarita."

THE SUPPLICATION (DEESIS): The 8 ct. value shows an Icon which is dated 1495 and was painted for the Batchkovo Monastery. It is unique in that it was painted on a chocolate-colored background and not gold, which was the first time such a technique was used. It is tempera on pinewood, measuring 107.5 x 3 cm., and is in the National Museum, Sofia.

Christ is presented as the Supreme Judge. He is seated on a throne which has no back, and holds an open Bible in His left hand. The text on the page is in Greek. The Virgin Mary on the left and St. John the Baptist on the right are interceding for the salvation of mankind and the world before the Supreme Judge. One source stated that the "bunch of flowers wrongly placed on the left of the Virgin's shoulder was a sign of naivety in folk art."

Beneath the throne, to the right of the base, is the donor's inscription: "Prayer of Michael Bakshi, servant of the Lord, and his spouse Anna, April 15 in the year 7003." This "7003" is figured from the Creation and is translated as 1495 A.D. This Icon was also exhibited in Paris and Essen.

We have been informed that the Austrian Guild of St. Gabriel is in the process of issuing a catalogue of postal issues with a religious motif. This will be most welcome addition to collectors of religious stamps. Date of release or format of the catalogue are not yet known, but this information will be published as soon as received.

OUR LADY AND THE JUDGMENT OF SOULS

Father Horn

One of the stamps issued by the Republic of Dahomey on March 17, 1969, presents a painting attributed to Cesare da Sesto of the School of da Vinci, entitled "THE VIRGIN OF THE SCALES." The original is preserved in the Louvre Museum in Paris. To the right is the Archangel Michael holding scales or balances, one of his symbols. Included in the painting are the Blessed Mother and the Infant Jesus, St. Elizabeth and St. John the Baptist.

The scales, in relation to Our Lady and the Archangel Michael, refer to the judgment of souls, the good deeds of a man on one scale and the bad on the other. Legends of the Middle Ages abound with the stories of the powerful intercession of the Blessed Mother before the judgment seat of Her Divine Son in relation to those who were especially devoted to the Virgin Mary during their lives. Paintings and sculptures of the period showing both the Blessed Mother as co-redemptrix and St. Michael as custodian of the scales are numerous. One ancient writer described the Archangel Michael as: "arbiter of man's destinies on the threshold of the world to come." This can also be applied to Our Lady.

"EMBROIDERED MADONNA"

The 15 centavos value stamp in the set issued by Colombia on December 4, 1954 presents a work found in the Chapel of Our Lady of the Rosary, Bogota, Colombia; the same design is also seen on the 5 centavos stamp for ordinary mail. For those who are not familiar with the "story behind the stamp" for this issue, we quote Father Horn's article which appeared in the April 1955 issue of "Queen of the Missions."

The inscription at the bottom reads: "The image woven for the College by Queen Margaret of Austria." This is a small Madonna and Child woven on cloth under which are seen seven cherubs. This is known as the "Embroidered Madonna." Not much has been written about this Madonna which is the most treasured object in the above mentioned Chapel of Our Lady of the Rosary. The College was founded in 1653 by Fray Cristobal de Torres, a Dominican, and it was endowed with all the privileges of the University of Salamanca in Spain. He had been the confessor and court preacher of Queen Margaret of Austria, the wife of King Philip III of Spain who died in 1621. After the death of her husband, this pious Queen continued her charitable works, and when her former confessor founded the college at Bogota she embroidered an image of "Our Lady of the Rosary" and sent it to him with this message: "I am sending the one who is to be the Patroness and Mother of your college and collegians." Since that time the original image has been the object of great reverence at the college. This is the origin of the "Embroidered Madonna."

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN MADONNA IN ART?

If you are, there is a wide field open to you. Over the past several years many countries have issued stamps which depict the Madonna in Art, some after masterpieces in their own national galleries or museums, and some after the originals in the famous galleries such as the Louvre, etc. True, some of the issuing countries are considered suspect, yet the stamp does reproduce a masterpiece which is a delight to behold, particularly for those of us who never expect to see the original in person. The question may arise as to how one would mount a collection of Madonna in Art. Perhaps these few suggestions may be of some benefit. It could be divided into: pictures, sculptures, stained glass, wood carvings, etchings and engravings, tapestries. It could be further divided by School: Italian, Spanish, French, Flemish, German, Oriental; or it could be segregated by period: Medieval, Gothic, Renaissance, Baroque, Modern. One could mount the stamps by the artist, thus covering his life with a showing of his works. So, if you are looking for a new area of collecting - how about the "Madonna in Art"? We feel you will find a most fascinating and interesting area.
