Beauty of the Season... Really?!

Polar Vortex - Every time I hear that term, it strikes fear in my heart. I despise the cold. If I had it my way it would be sunny and 75 all year long. Not only do I think this, but I will tell anyone who will listen. I get so caught up in my own need for warmth and comfort that I forget about the beauty of the season. Genesis tells us that God created everything and it was good. Summer is not better than winter, fall, or spring. Each season offers to us a unique glimpse of the beauty in God's creation.

There is something spiritual about looking out and seeing barren trees and the snow covered ground. It has been stripped down; there is no need for anything else but the basics. The land is resting in these cold months, preparing itself for something else beautiful to grow after the time of rest is complete. Like it is true for the land, it is true for our own lives. There comes a time in which we must rid ourselves of the unimportant and go back to the basics. During our time of rest, God will prepare us too, for something to spring up inside us creating something beautiful for the world to see.
