DAYTON, Feb. -- Ohio Attorney General William B. Saxbe will lead a slate of seven speakers at the University of Dayton's second annual conference on state and local government here Apr. 7.

The one-day program, designed for township, county, village and city officials, will serve as a "valuable orientation for newly elected or appointed public officials, a good refresher for veteran administrators and an interesting survey for public-minded citizens," according to University officials.

Saxbe will speak at the conference luncheon on "State and Local Government Units--Functions and Relationships." Joining him and the topics they will treat will be:

Harold Waddel, deputy director of highways for right-of-way, "Local Government Planning to Meet Throughway and Expressway Requirements"; James Maloon, director of research and statistics, Ohio Department of Taxation, "Considerations in Establishing an Equitable Local Tax Structure";

George B. Hutchinson, Armco Drainage and Metal Products, Middletown, "Community Assets in the Location of New Industry"; Dr. John Bollens, executive director, Metropolitan Community Studies, Inc., Dayton, "Local Autonomy and the Metropolitan Concept";

Also on the program will be a discussion of "Problems of the Central Business District." Conference chairman will be State Representative Charles W. Whalen, Jr.
