DAYTON -- Topics ranging from the location of new industry in a community to the attainment of more efficient public administration at the local government level will be discussed at a special one-day conference here Apr. 7.

Township, village, city and county officials from all over the state are expected to attend the University of Dayton's second annual conference on State and Local Government.

Luncheon speaker on the program will be Ohio's Attorney General, William B. Saxbe, who will discuss the functions and relationships of state and local governmental units.

Other topics to be treated on the program by almost a dozen speakers include problems of the central business district, fringe area problems and city expansion, throughway and expressway planning, local tax structure and the "metropolitan concept."

The conference is sponsored by the University's division of specialized educational services. Reservations are now being accepted.
