DAYTON--More than 100 village, township, city and county officials and interested citizens are expected here Apr. 7 for the University of Dayton's second annual conference on State and Local Government.

Eight experts in various fields will discuss a variety of topics at the conference including fringe area problems and city expansion, problems of the central business district, throughways and expressways, local tax structure establishment, location of new industry, and efficient public administration.

Luncheon speaker will be the Honorable William B. Saxbe, Ohio Attorney General.

The conference is sponsored by the University's Community Service Center.
