Ohio students choosing cheaper, alternative means of education over four-year colleges

KAITLYN RIDEL
Staff Writer

Steep tuition costs at four-year institutions are causing some Ohio students to engage in alternative means of education and to save money while still obtaining degrees.

More than half of first-year students enrolled last year in Ohio institutions attended community colleges and branch campuses, according to the Dayton Daily News. Students are flocking to community colleges to obtain two years of credits and then transferring to four-year colleges to finish their degrees, which has saved Ohio students around $20 million this year alone, according to the DDN.

This past fall at the University of Dayton, there were 174 transfer students, according to the Office of Admissions. Of those students, 48.6 percent transferred from two-year institutions.

“I attended Sinclair Community College before UD because I received a scholarship through ... my high school,” said Brad Lefeld, a UD student and visual communication design major. “The scholarship essentially paid for two free years at Sinclair — the scholarship was only for $3,000, but it paid for the majority of the tuition involved.”

The cost of tuition at Sinclair Community College for local residents is roughly $2,169 per year, as compared with UD’s tuition of $29,930.

Natalie O’Connor, a current student at UD and visual communication design major, began taking classes during high school at Miami Valley Career Technology School, a technical school for commercial graphic design that is associated with Sinclair Community College.

“They (MVCTC) have an accreditation with Sinclair and offer 15 credit hours worth of classes just because I attended MVCTC,” O’Connor said. “I would not have received any of those credits if I would have chosen a different college.”

Karen Anney Korn, an anthropology professor at both SCC and UD, said she has noticed the high amount of students in her classes at SCC that are planning to transfer to another school.

With a 21 percent increase in transfer students in the state of Ohio, it seems that more students are starting to catch on to this money-saving option, she said.

“The majority of my students at SSDC are enrolled in transfer modules,” Korn said. “That is, they are completing a course of study at SCC that was designed to transfer to Wright State or UD.”

Both Lefeld and O’Connor said they attended SCC at little to no cost before attending UD. However, there are pros and cons no matter which path prospective college students choose, according to Lefeld.

“SCC had a low tuition and great staff that taught in the design department, [but] UD is great because everyone is more my age, and there is more access to labs than at Sinclair,” Lefeld said.

Dining Services works to balance caloric items with healthy choices for students

ASHLEY ALT
Staff Writer

Students who regularly eat school lunches have a greater chance of becoming overweight, according to the Dayton Daily News.

University of Dayton Dining Services is attempting to combat this trend, making sure there is a 50-50 split between high calorie and healthier products of the 50-50 split between high calorie and healthier products of...
FIFA ignored importance of human rights, Qatar wrong choice for World Cup

On Thursday, Dec. 2, FIFA announced Russia and Qatar as the host countries for the 2018 and 2022 FIFA World Cups.

Qatar won by a vote of 14-8, beating out the United States to host the tournament. I was as upset as the next U.S. soccer fan when I heard we wouldn’t have the opportunity to organize the games in the near future. But, I have another overlying qualm with FIFA’s choice for the 2022 World Cup, which, in my eyes, makes the decision downright wrong. Qatar’s questionable human rights record has made it wholly clear that preparations for this event will be tainted largely by forced slave labor, something that such a renowned international sport association should not be endorsing.

Qatar, located in the Middle East, is a small nation of about 1.6 million people. The country is rich in oil, and has begun to boast one of the highest gross domestic products per capita in the entire world in recent years. Qatar has been rising fast in terms of global position, quickly becoming more powerful despite the country’s small size and population.

Because the country is vastly wealthy and is growing at an incredible rate, citizens from other Middle Eastern, African and Asian countries willingly travel to Qatar to find jobs as laborers or domestic workers. But, once arriving and being hired, some face harsh, unfair working conditions, in which they are forced and/or coerced to continue working. In Qatar, this modern-day slavery often involves forced hard labor.

According to the U.S. Department of State’s 2010 Trafficking in Persons Report, one of the most comprehensive databases of information regarding human trafficking, Qatar’s government does not comply with minimum human trafficking standards, and has no anti-trafficking legislation. The country also hasn’t shown a significant effort to increase prosecution of traffickers, and has made few strides in recent years to protect victims. Over the past nine years, Qatar has held the lowest ranking possible in the TIP Report’s four possible grades.

So, here’s my question: When Qatar openly has such a horrible human rights record, why did an established, well-funded organization such as FIFA decide to put an international event in the country?

These instances of human trafficking are well documented, not only in state documents like the TIP Report, but also in easily reached websites – there’s even a separate “Human Rights” section of the country’s Wikipedia page.

Qatar’s World Cup proposal includes the use of 12 different soccer stadiums, nine of which have yet to be built. Of the remaining three, all are planned to undergo renovations before 2022. Though the plans are ambitious and do indeed look impressive, who does FIFA think will build Qatar’s new stadiums? When trafficking victims can be forced by their traffickers to work long hours with little to no pay, are the new buildings really going to be built by honest means?

FIFA president Sepp Blatter defended the association’s country choice by saying the Arabic world had not yet hosted a World Cup since the event’s inception. While I understand FIFA’s reasoning to give the tournament to a country in the Middle East, I would have hoped it would have taken the concept of human rights into consideration when making its decision.

It’s a wonderful idea to get developing countries involved in the World Cup, but it seems to me that Qatar needs to prove itself as worthy before it’s chosen as a host. It’s on my personal bucket list to go to a Cup at some point in my life, but I definitely won’t be choosing 2022 to attend. Shelling out big bucks to sit in a brand new, modern stadium built by the hands of exploited men and women doesn’t sit very well with me, and I hope it doesn’t with you either.

WikiLeaks poses threat to U.S. national security, diplomacy

KAYLEIGH FLADUNG
Staff Writer

Starting Sunday, Nov. 28, WikiLeaks began a slow release of 251,287 confidential documents, known as “cables,” which have received international attention.

According to its website, WikiLeaks is “a non-profit media organization dedicated to bringing important news and information to the public.”

The cables released span from December 1966 through February 2010 and have so far covered topics as sensitive as China’s frustration with North Korea and aspects of the War in Iraq, according to CNN.

“In terms of diplomacy and American foreign policy, it (WikiLeaks) complicates things for the United States,” said Dr. Jaro Bilocerkowycz, a political science professor at UD.

WikiLeaks has leaked documents that cover topics including wars, murders, government transparency, diplomacy and Internet filtering, among many other topics. Some documents released include Guantanamo Bay’s main operations manual; U.S. embassy profiles on the Icelandic prime minister; foreign minister and ambassador; warnings to the U.S. not to chase suspects into Iran; and reports on an insider trading program at JPMorgan & Chase Co.

This strain of leaks also includes 40,000 reports about operations in Iraq that were released in October and 70,000 reports on the war in Afghanistan that were released in July, according to CNN.

“[WikiLeaks] has let us see how deals are made or what is going on behind the public face of diplomacy,” said Anthony Talbott, a political science professor. “It is very unprecedented. I can’t think of another time when something of this magnitude has come out.”

Bilocerkowycz said these cables are not positive for the U.S. relationships with other countries because of many of the documents that have been leaked contain comments about other world leaders.

“It has embarrassed the U.S.,” Bilocerkowycz said. “There is a need for a certain amount of trust and candorness among diplomats.”

WikiLeaks, founded by Australian Julian Assange, was created in 2006, but this latest leak of cables has been the most prolific.

Assange allegedly obtained the documents through Private Bradley Manning, an Army intelligence analyst currently stationed in Iraq, according to PolTIco, an American political journalism organization.

Manning was charged in July and awaits court proceedings for crimes that include “illegally disclosing classified information and illegally downloading more than 150,000 diplomatic cables,” according to PolTIco.

“Assange is critiquing foreign policy by exposing these leaks, and this will complicate American foreign policy and diplomatic relations,” Bilocerkowycz said. “The whole world is reading about it. It is so global, and now the U.S. is doing damage control.”

It’s expected that more leaks will continue to surface in the coming months. Countries around the world are looking at ways to protect their documents and prevent this kind of occurrence from ever happening again.

“It is a new world here,” Bilocerkowycz said. “Everyone has to be more sensitive to cyber vulnerabilities. By publicizing [WikiLeaks], it makes it so that others are disinclined to speak with our government. It has hurt the communication channel.”

Talbott said he plans to talk about WikiLeaks in his POL 101 Global Politics class next semester. He said this situation will probably lead to diplomats and world leaders returning to safer, slower ways of communication.

“Of the biggest things it has done is shown people nothing is truly secret or hidden anymore,” Talbott said. “Hopefully this will lead to more honesty and transparency.”
SGA passes budget legislation, plans to allocate funds to student organizations

CHRIS RIZER
Chief News Writer

The University of Dayton Student Government Association Senate passed legislation defining the process for the allocation of funds to student organizations at its public meeting Sunday, Dec. 5.

The document, titled “The Student Government Association Financial Procedures,” formalizes the course of action for student organizations to request funds from SGA, according to Kelly Nestor, junior and executive vice president of SGA.

“The finance committee makes its recommendations to Senate based on this document, and based on the senate vote, student organizations will be granted funding.” Nestor said.

Under the legislation, registered student organizations will submit budget requests to the finance committee, and after review, final student organization budget decisions will be made by the Senate vote, said Jeff Schumacher, sophomore and SGA vice president of finance.

If the finance committee does not approve the student organization's requested funds, the student organization can schedule a hearing to ask for a different amount of money before the Senate votes to finalize its budget, Schumacher said.

Schumacher said SGA plans to distribute funds to student organizations in February, after all organizations' proposed budgets have passed through the Senate. The exact date has not been determined.

Schumacher said SGA will set aside money for student organizations to request additional funds beyond their regular approved budgets as well.

The SGA Senate's passage of this document adheres to its commitment to develop a process for dispensing funds to student organizations by Sunday, Dec. 5, as outlined in a resolution it passed along with its $154,000 budget at the public meeting Sunday, Nov. 7.

SGA passed legislation in spring 2010 to give at least 25 percent of its budget to student organizations, according to Sarah Schoper, SGA adviser, assistant dean of students and associate director of leadership development.

SGA receives its budget every February from the $12 student activities fee that all full and three-quarter time undergraduate students pay each semester, according to Kerin Banfield, budget analyst for the Office of the Provost.

The financial procedures document passed on Sunday outlines the finance committee's powers over the process for the allocation of funds, conditions student organizations must meet to receive funds, what SGA will and will not fund, how much money it will give the organizations and other financial procedure requirements and standards pertaining to the process, Schumacher said.

According to the document, SGA will not give organizations their entire approved budget all at once. After its budget has been approved, a student organization must submit a request of funds to Schumacher or an equivalent designated SGA representative for any desired budget spending.

“I think definitely that I'm most excited about communicating this to student organizations and letting them know that SGA is going to start giving them funds, which was one of Jim’s and my goals from the get-go.”

Kelly Nestor, Executive vice president of SGA

These requests are due by 5 p.m. on Thursdays, and decisions will be made on Fridays.

Receipts from budget spending must be turned in with a week of when the organization acquires funds, according to the document. If an organization spends less money than it was delegated, it must return all excess funds to SGA, or a hold will be placed on the organization's request of future funds.

The document also says the finance committee can audit a student organization and put a hold on a request of funds at any time for any legitimate cause. SGA is required to notify the organization of the basis for its hold, and also must tell the organization how to appeal a hold, which it has 10 business days to do.

There also is a section in the document stipulating that student organizations must have a UD Bursar account in order to be given SGA funding starting with the 2011-2012 academic year.

Schumacher said the Bursar account requirement was added to the legislation because not many student organizations have UD Bursar’s accounts, and putting all the accounts in one place makes it easier for SGA to work with the university. It also will make funding a more transparent process.

He said many student organizations currently have private bank accounts which may, for example, be in the name of the organization's adviser. This is problematic because an organization’s adviser may change from one year to another.

“It’s not uniform, and the university has no control over it or access to it, and we understand that’s a difficult change to make in four months,” Schumacher said.

“The Bursar’s Office and student organizations don’t have to notify the organization's adviser, this is going to be much easier for SGA to access and manage this money.”

Schumacher said the finance committee knows that the funding process is new to all students, and SGA wants to work with student organizations so they understand it. He said SGA is compiling information explaining the process to give to Amy-Lopez Matthews, director of Student Life and Kennedy Union, to distribute to student organizations.

Jim Saywell, senior and SGA president, said SGA decided to take its time to formulate the document to ensure it developed an effective process to get money to student organizations for this year and years to come.

He said the extra time taken to prepare the document will ensure organizations fully understand it.

“We feel like this is the best way to utilize funds set aside for student organizations, and Jeff has done a really good job with this, so it’s a fair and equal process to student organizations,” Nestor said.

Nestor said student organizations have been patient with SGA, as it has taken a long time to develop the financial process.

“I think definitely that I’m most excited about communicating this to student organizations and letting them know that SGA is going to start giving them funds, which was one of Jim’s and my goals from the get-go,” Nestor said.
NEW DEAN CHOOSEN FOR SCHOOL OF LAW

MEGAN HARRELL
Lead News Writer

The University of Dayton School of Law will have a new dean beginning in July 2011. After serving for 10 years, Lisa Kloppenberg, the current dean of UD’s law school, has decided to return to the UD faculty to pursue her scholarship and teaching, according to a university press release. The search for a new dean began about a year ago, and the process lasted for approximately eight months, the press release said.

“I have great admiration for the work that Dean Lisa Kloppenberg and the law school faculty have done to create the law school’s innovative curriculum,” McGreal said. “In addition, the law school has many productive faculty members who are writing exciting and thoughtful scholarship, and who are recognized as experts in their fields.”

Throughout his interviewing process for the dean position, McGreal said one aspect of UD that appealed to him the most was its concept of community.

“At UD, I learned that community means a commitment to open intellectual inquiry, public service, respect and support for all members and educating the whole person,” McGreal said.

Currently, McGreal teaches at the Southern Illinois University School of Law, where he has worked for five years. He also was a professor at South Texas College of Law for 10 years. In addition, McGreal has worked as an instructor in the executive master’s program at the Mays Business School at Texas A&M University for the past 12 years. According to Dennis Greene, professor of law at UD, McGreal was brought to the university’s attention by a search firm company, which has worked with the university on prior searches as well. Greene and other UD community members involved in the search thought McGreal particularly stood out from the other candidates.

“McGreal is an outstanding scholar with a great leadership vision for the University of Dayton School of Law,” Greene said.

According to McGreal, all the UD students he has met with have shown a genuine enthusiasm for their law school and the Dayton community. He said he is excited to begin his time at UD in the summer of 2011.

“I am looking forward to working with such outstanding faculty, students and staff,” he said.

Paul McGreal will begin his position as the new dean of the UD School of Law in July 2011. PHOTO CONTRIBUTED BY UD MEDIA RELATIONS

At the end of every semester, students are asked to fill out professor evaluations to honestly and constructively, give insight to a professor’s effectiveness in the classroom. How effective do you think this method is?

Global connection
To read all of the news staff’s blog posts, go to: www.flyernews.com

Classifieds
Flyer News reserves the right to reject, alter or omit advertisements. Advertisements must conform to the policies of Flyer News. For a review of these policies, contact the Flyer News business office. Business Office: 937-229-3813; Fax: 937-229-3853; E-mail: advertising@flyernews.com. Web site: www.flyernews.com/advertising

NEWLY RENOVATED HOUSES-APARTMENTS.
5 minute walk to UD. Call UD grad. John Polley 937-223-9790

Leo's Quality Student Housing
The Original! Behind Panera Bread
Secure your housing for next year
Furnished, some homes with leather living room sets, Maytag washer/dryer
Some homes with marble bathrooms, off street parking, first class.
Check out website leosrentals.com or call (937)456-7743 or cell (937)371-1046.
Availability 3-5 students
65, 63, 57, 49, 29, 38, 40, 50 Jasper St.
119 Fairground, 48, 50 Woodland, 42, 46
Frankstreet. To make your stay comfortable and a very enjoyable schoolyear.

For Rent: 2 bedroom house at 31 Woodland for Fall ‘10 & Spring ‘11 semesters. Go to,
UDGHETTO.COM

HELP WANTED
Need extra money? Lunne Lawn &
Landscaping Co., a UD alum-run business, is in need of full or part time workers for fall leaves and planting. Flexible around schedules. Oakwood/Kettering area. Top pay.
Experience and Transportation preferred.
Call Brian at (937) 604-6144 cell or
(937) 299-4999 office.

Babysitter needed for 2 children, ages 7 and 9 on weekdays from approx. 3 pm to 8 pm.
Seven minutes from UD. Help with dinner prep and clean up, play, homework, and daylight. Some weekends optional. Childcare experience necessary. Prefer local freshman or sophomore but not required. Please call Beth at 937-602-7310 and leave your name and phone number (repeat phone number) and best time to contact you.

Don't miss your chance to advertise in the FN!!
CONTACT US TODAY!
advertising@flyernews.com
937-229-3813
HOLIDAY CHEER, ICE COLD BEER

Participants of a past Santa Pub Crawl celebrate. This year’s pub crawl will take place from 5:30 p.m. to 2:30 a.m. Saturday in bars throughout downtown and the Oregon District. CONTRIBUTED BY KRISTEN WICKER/DOWNTOWN DAYTON PARTNERSHIP

If spreading Christmas cheer and drinking beer is your idea of a good time, then hop on board for the Oregon District’s Santa Pub Crawl.

The sixth annual event will take place from 5:30 p.m. through 2:30 a.m. on Saturday, Dec. 11.

Ryann McCoy, a coordinator for the crawl, said the only requirements are to dress up and bring a $10 unwrapped toy, or monetary donation.

“It is important to make it to the first two stops in order to turn in the toys,” McCoy said. “It will also be easier and cheaper to park the earlier you get there.”

McCoy said the seven bars participating in the crawl – the Dublin Pub, Oregon Express, Blind Bob’s, Tumbleweed Connection, Trolley Stop, Bar Tiki and Newcom’s Tavern – are waiving their cover charges for people in costumes.

“The costumes get more and more creative every year,” she said. “You will see anything from Buddy the Elf, to Santa and his reindeer, and even people using Christmas lights as jewelry.”

Several cab companies and at least two designated driving services will be available to drive crawl participants home for a fee. These means of transportation, available most evenings in the Oregon District, will be offered to help reduce the risk of drunk driving.

Additionally, downtown’s Doubletree and Crowne Plaza hotels are offering special room rates for party-goers. Those interested should call either hotel and ask for the “take the elevator home” package, McCoy said.

Brian Young, founder of the Dayton crawl, said his previous hometown, Denver, had the biggest pub crawl in the world.

“When I got here [Dayton], I wanted to get some people together for a good time and a good cause;” he said.

As time passed, the crawl expanded, Young said.

“It started out with 14 or 15 of us running around in Santa suits,” Young said. “Now we’re in our sixth year and expecting 300 participants.”

Thanks to last year’s event, 270 presents were donated to Toys for Tots, he said.

The crowds usually consist of 20 to 30 year olds, but according to Young and McCoy, all adults 21 and up are welcome.

“Every year there’s a healthy amount of college students,” Young said.

Kristen Wicker from the Downtown Dayton Partnership said the crawl gives participants a taste of bars in the Oregon District.

“It is a good way to experience what is uniquely Dayton,” she said.

JUSTIN GUINN
Staff Writer

2010 SANTA PUB CRAWL
SATURDAY, DEC. 11

DUBLIN PUB, 300 WAYNE AVE., 5:30 TO 7 P.M.
OREGON EXPRESS, 336 E. FIFTH ST., 7 TO 8:30 P.M.
BLIND BOB’S, 430 E. FIFTH ST., 8:30 TO 9:30 P.M.
TUMBLEWEED CONNECTION, 454 E. FIFTH ST., 9:30 TO 10:30 P.M.
TROLLEY STOP, 530 E. FIFTH ST., 10:30 TO 11:30 P.M.
BAR TIKI, 261 WAYNE AVE., 11:30 P.M. TO 12:30 A.M.
NEWCOM’S TAVERN, 418 E. FIFTH ST., 12:30 TO 2:30 A.M.
Writer, stage star shares wit, insight

SARA GREEN

Aust. AAE Editor

Pat Hazell, the writer and star of "The Wonder Bread Years," playing through Sunday, Dec. 19, at downtown's Victoria Theatre, started his career doing magic tricks and juggling as a street performer.

"I started writing stand-up comedy when I moved to California and decided to leave all the variety stuff behind," he said.

Hazell wrote comedy with the intentions of performing on "The Tonight Show," where many stars launched their careers.

"A lot of confidence started building while I was writing jokes for Jerry Seinfeld and Ellen DeGeneres," he said. "When I saw [the jokes] were working and getting laughs, I thought I should just create the material for myself."

"The Wonder Bread Years" is a collection of Hazell's nostalgia-based material. When appearing on "The Tonight Show," he wrote jokes about Halloween and Thanksgiving, holidays from which most people have a lot of memories.

"My voice is nostalgic, looking back on the things growing up," Hazell said. "The product Wonder Bread sort of defined, a little bit, [was] the age of innocence with their marketing campaigns. I wanted [the audience] to understand immediately how important nostalgia was to the evening."

Before writing for well-known comedians, Hazell was part of a comedy group that wrote short plays and skits.

"Once we [wrote] it and rehearsed it, we'd have to find a place where we could [perform it]," he said.

Hazell and his friends performed in comedy clubs and bars, though they were not yet of legal age, he said.

"We were underage, and we would go to a bar, but they would have to take us in the back," he said. "We weren't allowed to go where they served the alcohol, and then they'd have to sneak us back out the back."

All the sneaking around certainly paid off as Hazell's newest adventure, "The Wonder Bread Years," is making people laugh and bringing them together.

According to Hazell, "The Wonder Bread Years" is about the universally contagious feeling that comes when a group of people can relate, saying, "Oh, I had that." or, "That happened to me."

During the show, there are video slides and filmstrips that display old products in the hopes of triggering memories.

"That's what makes it more than stand up comedy," Hazell said about the slides and filmstrips. According to Hazell, people tend to lose their sense of wonder. One of the goals of his show is to help the audience regain that feeling.

"We face war. We face terror. It kind of sucks the wonder out of our lives. There is a lot of cynicism, bitterness and disappointment. We need to be reminded of how much joy there is," he said. Hazell hopes the audience will bond, sharing their memories and experiencing positive feelings.

"It doesn't matter if they're 65 or 25, there was still a time when they were 5," he said. "I think that they'll see it doesn't really matter if milk money was a nickel or 50 cents; they still have that memory."

Along with jokes, "The Wonder Bread Years" contains anecdotes from Hazell's own childhood.

"I had a Mr. Potato Head that got run over by a lawn mower," he said. "We called it Mr. Hash Browns for a few years. Then there's the evaporated milk; I always wondered why the can wasn't empty when you opened it up."

Constantly writing material is important when pursuing a comedy career, Hazell said.

"The most demanding role is the writer and producer," he said. "You can't skip the process of creating it and editing it. You must archive as much material as often as you can, creating a stockpile of content for when you get the opportunity."

Hazell said he wants to encourage students and Dayton residents to go see "The Wonder Bread Years."

"I think that if people are ready to take a gamble on an original funny thing, they should come out and see it," Hazell said about his show. "They always say laughter is the best medicine, and this is a double dose – it's the maximum amount of laughter you can have in two hours."

FOR MORE ON ‘THE WONDER BREAD YEARS’ PLAY AND WHAT TO EXPECT >> www.flyernews.com

Past and present: the best Christmas music of all time

Gene Autry: As I realized one afternoon, this is one of the few songs to attempt bridging the religious and non-religious aspects of Christmas. That’s admirable by itself, and the song is helped immensely by Autry sounding like everybody’s grandfather.

"Feliz Navidad," by Jose Feliciano: Bilingual bliss, it’s a pick me up, the old fashioned way to teach infants Spanish and more intentionally enjoyable than Celine Dion’s version.

"Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer," by Dean Martin: This recording reaches a dangerous level of suave, but only when Dean’s singing. His German-Vegas accent as Santa is a comic delight.

"All I Want for Christmas is You," by Mariah Carey: Some love it, some hate it – it usually depends on whether or not they’ve seen “Love Actually” – but for my money, this song is a modern classic, so relentlessly cheerful and immense. And the music video’s not too bad, either.

"Santa Claus is Coming to Town," by Bruce Springstein and the E Street Band: It’s always a nice sign when the singer sounds like he’s having more fun recording a song than you are singing along with it. The teasing of the audience – and saxophonist Clarence Clemons – never fails to make me giggle.

SOUNDS OF THE SEASON:

- "Handel’s Messiah: The Composer’s Cut" by the Dayton Philharmonic Orchestra and a chamber choir at the Westminster Presbyterian Church, 125 N. Wilkinson St. The full version of “Messiah,” a three part operatic piece that depicts the life and resurrection of Christ, will be performed. Students tickets are $14. To learn more, call 937-224-45402.

- "The Nutcracker" is back again, performed by the Dayton Ballet now through Sunday, Dec. 19, at the Schuster Center. The ballet, which will feature more than 100 local children, follows the story of Virginia and her nutcracker. Student discounts are available, and with student ID, all tickets are half-off 30 minutes before curtain time. Call 937-222-3630 for show times and more information.

- "The First Noel," by Nat King Cole: This is, without a doubt, the gold standard recording of my favorite carol. Even the generic choir version is the best music of all time Past and present: the best Christmas music of all time

PREVIEW OF ‘CHRISTMAS BELLES’

www.flyernews.com

"A&E Editor Frank Stanko shares his choices for a perfect yuletide playlist."

"The Nothing," by Nat King Cole: This is, without a doubt, the gold standard recording of my favorite carol. Even the generic choir version is the best music of all time.
Merry Christmas:
Holiday greeting not offensive or incorrect; expression of season of cheer, faith and backgrounds means that everyone is entitled to their voice and opinion.
So if you choose to say “Happy Holidays,” that’s fine, and I don’t think Christians should have a problem with it. You’re not taking away a Christian’s beliefs by saying that to them. However, it gets to a point that we are so obsessed with this political correctness that we let the words “Christmas” and “Merry Christmas” be deleted from our vocabulary, then we’re not truly diverse at all, as we’re not valuing all opinions.
You wouldn’t call a menorah a “holiday candle-holder” or a dreidel a “holiday spinning top,” as that might offend Jews. However, this happens every year for Christmas. Heaven forbid we use a word with the prefix “Christ” in it to describe anything related to the holidays.
I’m not asking that we all chug some Hater-Ade and unleash a fury on anyone who opts to say “Happy Holidays.” All I’m saying is that people should not take “Merry Christmas” offensively, just as people should not take “Happy Holidays” offensively.
And with that, I’d like to wish you all a very Merry Christmas.
Top 40 irrelevant measure of musical quality

Wade is implying that artists on the Top 40 do not put self-expression or emotion into their songs. You’re telling me Taylor Swift didn’t actually have teardrops on her guitar, Jay-Z doesn’t have 99 problems, and that this isn’t really the soundtrack to Kid Cudi’s life, just because they are deemed “mainstream”? Well, then I am left heartbroken.

What makes music good, passionate, or an even larger question: What makes it art? Wade seems to be insinuating the answer to this is the number of people — or lack thereof — listening to a song, or as long as it’s “seven minutes” long. So it has nothing to do with the content? The rhythm and melody? The lyrics? I have to disagree.

And nowshash: Justin Vernon of Bon Iver is featured on Kanye West’s new album, “My Beautiful Dark Twisted Fantasy,” which is currently No. 2 on iTunes. Perhaps Bon Iver, and I’m willing to guess other, lesser known artists Wade is suggesting, are more mainstream than he would care to admit.

To suggest that a person is a “coward” for enjoying Top 40 music is ridiculous. Perhaps it is a form of conformity to listen to the Top 40, but I would argue that re-fusing to listen to the Top 40 is also a form of conformity. So please, let’s not start that endless cycle. Similar to chivalry and Latin, anti-conformity is dead.

I’m sorry your roommate critiqued you for listening to “Kon- stantine” on repeat, but my roommate makes fun of me for listening to Phil Collins, following it by Lil’ Wayne, and finally jamming to the European pop hit, “Stereo Love.” I am OK with that. I embrace my diverse taste in music.

I just wish Wade and the others sharing his viewpoint would accept those choices. I listen to music, not because everyone else is listening to it, but because I’m not afraid to listen to whatever I want to.

In conclusion, I don’t give a crap about George Clooney or Stray- light Run. I am not settling. I can listen to The Dirty Projectors and still enjoy Justin Bieber. I get the best of both worlds. So just because you’re still experiencing the existentialism from your senior prom night, don’t take it out on me.

Letter to the editor

Presidential salary reflective of responsibilities

I found the letter to the editor entitled, “Show me the money: greater fiscal transparency necessary” quite difficult to read for a variety of reasons.

The author rightly states that the median family income for Dayton, Ohio, in 2008 was $57,204. He claims to give this number as a frame of reference, and then goes on to state that Dr. Daniel Curran is paid more than 14.5 times the “average” family in Dayton. I would like to point out that average and median are completely different, and thus the 14.5 times figure is just incorrect. If you are going to accuse Dr. Curran of making too much money, at least properly construe your reasoning.

Also look at that abbreviation in front of Curran: “Dr.” Does the median family in Dayton have a Ph.D. in it? Or for that matter, does the median Dayton family have the skill to run an educational institution with an over $300 million endowment? Would you pick a random Dayton citizen to run UD? I would not. Clearly this is an extremely challenging position that requires high levels of intelligence, charisma and dedication amongst a whole host of other qualifications.

Dayton Daily News also published another interesting figure: “Presidents at private research universities had a median pay of $627,750, an increase of 15.5 percent,” (figures for the fiscal year 2008). So Dr. Curran’s total compensation of $531,396 is $64,464 below the median for presidents of private research universities.

Even setting this aside, how does a high salary for Dr. Curran mean that UD is gouging students? The CEO for Wal-Mart makes about $6 million; does that mean that Wal-Mart is engaging in price gouging? Maybe his salary is high because he is doing a good job. Furthermore, how does Dr. Curran making a high salary mean that UD should allow students more access to its finances?

Also, why is the fact that your roommate critiquing you for listening to it, but because I’m not afraid to listen to whatever I want to.

In conclusion, I don’t give a crap about George Clooney or Stray-light Run. I am not settling. I can listen to The Dirty Projectors and still enjoy Justin Bieber. I get the best of both worlds. So just because you’re still experiencing the existentialism from your senior prom night, don’t take it out on me.

dr. curran's salary

letter to the editor

Presidential salary reflective of responsibilities

I found the letter to the editor entitled, “Show me the money: greater fiscal transparency necessary” quite difficult to read for a variety of reasons.

The author rightly states that the median family income for Dayton, Ohio, in 2008 was $57,204. He claims to give this number as a frame of reference, and then goes on to state that Dr. Daniel Curran is paid more than 14.5 times the “average” family in Dayton. I would like to point out that average and median are completely different, and thus the 14.5 times figure is just incorrect. If you are going to accuse Dr. Curran of making too much money, at least properly construe your reasoning.

Also look at that abbreviation in front of Curran: “Dr.” Does the median family in Dayton have a Ph.D. in it? Or for that matter, does the median Dayton family have the skill to run an educational institution with an over $300 million endowment? Would you pick a random Dayton citizen to run UD? I would not. Clearly this is an extremely challenging position that requires high levels of intelligence, charisma and dedication amongst a whole host of other qualifications.

Dayton Daily News also published another interesting figure: “Presidents at private research universities had a median pay of $627,750, an increase of 15.5 percent,” (figures for the fiscal year 2008). So Dr. Curran’s total compensation of $531,396 is $64,464 below the median for presidents of private research universities.

Even setting this aside, how does a high salary for Dr. Curran mean that UD is gouging students? The CEO for Wal-Mart makes about $6 million; does that mean that Wal-Mart is engaging in price gouging? Maybe his salary is high because he is doing a good job. Furthermore, how does Dr. Curran making a high salary mean that UD should allow students more access to its finances?

Also, why is the fact that your roommate critiquing you for listening to it, but because I’m not afraid to listen to whatever I want to.

In conclusion, I don’t give a crap about George Clooney or Stray-light Run. I am not settling. I can listen to The Dirty Projectors and still enjoy Justin Bieber. I get the best of both worlds. So just because you’re still experiencing the existentialism from your senior prom night, don’t take it out on me.

dr. curran's salary

letter to the editor

Presidential salary reflective of responsibilities

I found the letter to the editor entitled, “Show me the money: greater fiscal transparency necessary” quite difficult to read for a variety of reasons.

The author rightly states that the median family income for Dayton, Ohio, in 2008 was $57,204. He claims to give this number as a frame of reference, and then goes on to state that Dr. Daniel Curran is paid more than 14.5 times the “average” family in Dayton. I would like to point out that average and median are completely different, and thus the 14.5 times figure is just incorrect. If you are going to accuse Dr. Curran of making too much money, at least properly construe your reasoning.

Also look at that abbreviation in front of Curran: “Dr.” Does the median family in Dayton have a Ph.D. in it? Or for that matter, does the median Dayton family have the skill to run an educational institution with an over $300 million endowment? Would you pick a random Dayton citizen to run UD? I would not. Clearly this is an extremely challenging position that requires high levels of intelligence, charisma and dedication amongst a whole host of other qualifications.

Dayton Daily News also published another interesting figure: “Presidents at private research universities had a median pay of $627,750, an increase of 15.5 percent,” (figures for the fiscal year 2008). So Dr. Curran’s total compensation of $531,396 is $64,464 below the median for presidents of private research universities.

Even setting this aside, how does a high salary for Dr. Curran mean that UD is gouging students? The CEO for Wal-Mart makes about $6 million; does that mean that Wal-Mart is engaging in price gouging? Maybe his salary is high because he is doing a good job. Furthermore, how does Dr. Curran making a high salary mean that UD should allow students more access to its finances?

Also, why is the fact that your roommate critiquing you for listening to it, but because I’m not afraid to listen to whatever I want to.

In conclusion, I don’t give a crap about George Clooney or Stray-light Run. I am not settling. I can listen to The Dirty Projectors and still enjoy Justin Bieber. I get the best of both worlds. So just because you’re still experiencing the existentialism from your senior prom night, don’t take it out on me.
Men's Basketball

Defense, rebounding key to improving Flyers team

Head coach Gregory focuses on early consistency, season's continued development

NATE WAGGENSPACK
Assistant Sports Editor

The University of Dayton men’s basketball team is nine games into its season, and according to head coach Brian Gregory, its members have played to their potential only once.

That lone performance was Dayton's last game, a 70-58 victory against Miami University at UD Arena on Saturday, Dec. 4. Gregory said the reason for this inconsistency is that the Flyers are still in the middle of a process of improvement and are looking to take steps forward.

“It’s a daily process, and we did make another step,” Gregory said. “That really doesn’t mean anything unless you continue to [take more steps].”

While there is still plenty of work to be done, the Flyers exhibited improved efforts in terms of both defense and defensive rebounding against Miami. These two aspects were especially important to the win, and Gregory said they are a huge part of Dayton’s game.

“We’re best offensively when we’re in the open court, when we push the ball and play at a pace over a 40 minute time span that other teams aren’t accustomed to,” he said. “In order to do that, you have to get defensive stops and control the defensive glass. You can’t keep taking the ball out of the basket. Those two are so key to how we play that it really sets the tone.”

Senior forward Chris Wright, who led UD with 18 points and 11 rebounds Saturday, said defense and rebounding are all about effort and desire.

“It just shows how hard you’re playing,” Wright said. “If it’s important to you, then you’re going to do those things, you’re going to defend, you’re going to rebound. Those are just areas like making the hustle plays where you show who’s playing the hardest. You’ve got to get those areas to win the game.”

Along with Wright’s impressive defensive numbers in the win, he also contributed on the defensive side. He switched to guarding Miami junior center Julian Mavunga in the second half, and limited him to just five points after he had already scored 153 in the first 20 minutes.

Improvements can always be made on defense and rebounding, but UD took a step forward in those departments.

Wright said the next step for the team is on the offensive end with improved ball movement.

“We’re all capable scorers, but it is best if you share the ball,” he said. “The more you get everyone involved, the easier it is offensively.”

Gregory said he believes ball movement is also important for his team. He added that a little more consistent effort from game to game is something he would like to see, too.

“I think there’s a lot more steps we need to take,” he said. “The next one may be: Can you come back and play with that same type of pressure that we played with? Can we continue offensively to keep the ball moving? Sometimes when you have better offensive players, that ball can become stagnant, [but] we’re not as good that way, we’re better when [the] ball is moving.”

Another bright spot for the Flyers recently has been the development of several young players.

With junior forward Chris Johnson in foul trouble against Miami in the first half, freshman guard Brandon Spearman and freshman forward Devin Oliver stepped in and gave UD solid minutes.

Gregory took notice, and was excited about the prospect of having a deeper bench as the season goes on.

“I liked the way the young guys played in the game against Miami,” he said. “In a game of that intensity, I felt comfortable playing those guys. Every day they’re getting a little bit better, which gives everybody, including themselves, more confidence, which is so important this time of the year.”

Track and Field

UD begins highly anticipated season with championship expectations

BRENDAN HADER
Chief Sports Writer
JACOB ROSEN
Sports Editor

The University of Dayton’s track and field team and its star All-American began the 2010-2011 season with a successful start at the Oiler Opener in Findlay, Ohio on Friday, Dec. 3.

The Flyers, led by the first-ever All-American in the history of the UD program in senior Mallory Barnes, had six athletes finish in the top three of their respective events at the opener.

Head coach Adam Steinwachs said he was impressed by the efforts of his young squad at the competition hosted by the University of Findlay.

“I thought we did a good job of being competitive in our first meet of the year,” he said in a UD athletics press release. “We entered a limited number of events, but the ones we entered in, I thought we did a good job with.”

Barnes paced the field yet again in her weight throw event, surpassing 66 feet with her best attempt. Senior Kerry Allen set a new personal best in that event finishing in second place, but was still nearly four feet behind Barnes.

Another first-place finisher for Dayton at the season-opening competition was junior Courtney Siebenaller in pole vault. Junior Kelly Johnston (800 meter race), sophomore Katie Na- geotte (pole vault) and senior JoAnna Zaccari (shot put) also finished among the top three finalists.

Those kinds of results are ones that Barnes said she hopes to see out of her teammates all year.

“This year I have high expectations for the season,” she said. “I expect for every person to exceed their own expectations, as well as what others expect from them. There are a number of people on the team that have the ability to compete at the national level [for both indoor and outdoor competition].”

Based on last year’s success, the impressive finishes were no surprise for the Flyers. In the 2009-2010 campaign, three members of the team qualified for the NCAA Outdoor Championships, the most in the history of the program. UD was the Atlantic 10 Conference co-champion during the indoor season and then finished second in outdoor.

Steinwachs said the team’s strongest events this year will likely remain the pole vault, shot put and weight throw, with Barnes leading the way in the throwing events.

But there are plenty of other star athletes for the track and field Flyers. Allen finished second in the conference behind Barnes last season and narrowly missed qualifying for the NCAA’s. Catrion did qualify for nationals last year and will lead the sprinters in the middle distance running events, while seniors Liz Coorey and Maureen Bulgrin will highlight the distance events.

Steinwachs said the team is full of individuals in all areas that are capable of posting good results. He said a majority of last year’s top performers graduated, however, so a lot of underclassmen will be expected to step in and perform right away.

“I think first and foremost, we want to try and build on the success we’ve had every year, and so far in the three years that I’ve been here, we’ve been able to do that,” Steinwachs said. “We’ve been able to get a little bit better every year. That’s one of the goals is to get better, to get more people to nationals, to take a run at winning conference again, and we’ll see how it goes. But I think we’ll certainly be in position. We have the talent to be able to make a run at it, and to get better.”

No matter what though, the success of the Flyers will begin with Barnes, and she said she has set high goals of achievement for the squad.

“As a captain, my goal for the team is to win the A-10 championship title both indoor and outdoor, in addition to having more people compete at the national level,” Barnes said. “I have full confidence that with the talent that we have on the team this year, these goals are very attainable.”
SWEETEN YOUR BREAK WITH WINTER SPORTS

While away from the University of Dayton enjoying four weeks of no schoolwork, you should be aware of some of the marquee matchups taking place over break in the sports world. So while passing around presents, enjoying holiday feasts and welcoming in the New Year, don’t stray too far from your couch and remote control. Here are some games you won’t want to miss.

National Football League

New Orleans Saints at Atlanta Falcons, Monday, Dec. 27 – Dayton alumnus and former NFL head coach Jon Gruden will be giddy as always for this Monday Night Football showdown between two of the National Football Conference’s elite teams. The Falcons have narrowly escaped defeats on route to their 10–2 record, but how long will this stretch continue?

Chicago Bears at Green Bay Packers, Sunday, Jan. 2 – This game may very well determine the winner of the NFC North division, a huge factor in the playoff picture. Bears quarterback Jay Cutler has been uncharacteristically not self-destructive lately, while his Green Bay counterpart Aaron Rodgers has helped his team look like the contender it was expected to be.

Women’s Soccer

While away from the University of Dayton enjoying four weeks of no schoolwork, you should be aware of some of the marquee matchups taking place over break in the sports world. So while passing around presents, enjoying holiday feasts and welcoming in the New Year, don’t stray too far from your couch and remote control. Here are some games you won’t want to miss.

National Basketball Association

Miami Heat at Los Angeles Lakers, Saturday, Dec. 25 – Take a break from the 24-hour “A Christmas Story” marathon and your obsessive relatives to check out the defending champion Lakers host everyone’s favorite Miami Heat. LeBron James and the Cleveland Cavaliers carved up Los Angeles on Christmas Day last year, so Kobe Bryant and the Lakers, certainly tired of all the Miami talk, will look to exact revenge. And stay tuned prior to this game, as the Boston Celtics travel to the Orlando Magic.

Oklahoma City Thunder at Dallas Mavericks, Thursday, Jan. 6 – Watch one of the game’s best and most exciting tandems, as the Thunder’s Kevin Durant and Russell Westbrook head to Dallas to take on one of the game’s best players and teams in Dirk Nowitzki and the Mavericks.

College Basketball

No. 9 Michigan State University vs. No. 16 University of Alabama, Capital One Bowl, Saturday, Jan. 1 – While this is not a Bowl Championship Series game, these are two very good teams that could produce one of the better bowls games of the season.

No. 4 Stanford University vs. No. 13 Virginia Tech University, Orange Bowl, Monday, Jan. 3 – Take a look at next year’s potential No. 1 NFL draft pick, as quarterback Stanford’s Andrew Luck faces the Hokies.

No. 6 Ohio State University vs. No. 8 University of Arkansas, Sugar Bowl, Tuesday, Jan. 4 – I’m looking forward to one quarterback clearly outplaying the other. … And I’m referring to Arkansas’ Ryan Mallett over Ohio State’s Terrell Pryor.

No. 1 Auburn University vs. No. 2 Oregon University, BCS National Championship, Jan. 10 – I’m sure you didn’t need to be told to watch this, but this should be a fantastic game with a lot of points scored.

Like the BCS system or not, but at least the two best teams with two of the best players in Auburn’s Cameron Newton and Oregon’s LaMichael James made it this year.

College Football

No. 6 University of Connecticut at No. 3 University of Pittsburgh, Monday, Dec. 27 – This is one of many Big East Conference slugfests of the season. Enjoy.

Xavier University at Cincinnati, Thursday, Jan. 6 – Being from Cincinnati and loving the Bearcats and Cincinnati chill, talking about the Skyline Cross town Shootout might be a biased choice, but oh well. This is one of the most physical and unpredictable games each year between schools two miles apart that loathe each other. Not to mention, it’s another opportunity to root against Xavier.

Dayton at Xavier, Saturday, Jan. 15 – If you are associated with UD, this game shouldn’t need much explaining.

We don’t like them, and they don’t like us. While both teams not playing as well as they hoped at this point, winning at Xavier for the first time since 1981 could be a great springboard for the rest of the season.

Martin Luther King Day, Monday, Jan. 17 – Make your way back to campus, and enjoy your last day of break with four games featuring eight teams currently ranked in the top 12. That is not a typo.

National Hockey League

Washington Capitals at Pittsburgh Penguins, Saturday, Jan. 1 – I felt the need to give hockey some love, and this game should actually be good. The fourth-ever Winter Classic will be played outside at Heinz Field in Pittsburgh where the Steelers play. Also, you’ll get the chance to see two of the sport’s best players in Alex Ovechkin for Washington and Sidney Crosby for Pittsburgh. Come on, give it a chance.

Fall club sports teams complement UD’s athletic success

DAN VODDEN
Assistant Sports Editor

With the recent success of the University of Dayton’s fall varsity sports programs, the performances of UD’s club sports often are overlooked.

Many of the clubs are finished with their competition for the semester, and several represented that same varsity success at their own particular sports.

The club golf team coughed off one of its most successful seasons ever with a trip to National Collegiate Club Golf Association Fall Championship in North Carolina.

The squad qualified after ending in third place at the two regional tournaments at Purdue University and the University of Illinois, and the golfers continued that stretch in North Carolina.

“We finished ninth out of 12 teams competing against the best colleges in the country,” said Matt Weinberger, sophomore club golf president.

Weinberger led all UD golfers with scores of 79 and 75, placing 18th overall of the total 90 players who competed. Fellow sophomore Jeremy Schwob finished second on the team with scores of 82 and 79, while freshman Kyle Geist took third with rounds of 85 and 75.

On the lacrosse field, the men’s club team also had an impressive season, finishing with an unblemished 8–0 record.

The Flyers’ schedule consisted of other Division I club teams, as well as varsity teams from Division II and Division III schools, and included a marquee win over Michigan State University.

The Spartans finished second in the Central Collegiate Lacrosse Association conference a season ago to the reigning back-to-back champions, the University of Michigan.

“Our offense was anchored by our attack-man, [junior] Chris- tian Furby, [junior] John Mor- row, and [sophomore] Will McCormick,” said Alex Reynolds, senior club lacrosse president. “All three put up huge numbers that contributed to our undefeated record.”

One of UD’s lesser-known club teams, the women’s rugby squad, also had a 2–3 record in its fall season.

In its season opener, the Flyers pounded Eastern Kentucky University 38–0 for their biggest win of the year.

In the other victory, a conver- sion kicked by sophomore Col- leen Peist in the final seconds gave U of 7–5 nod over Marshall.

“This fall we had a relatively young team that consisted pri- marily of sophomores, but de- spite our youth, we still man- aged to improve on our record from last season,” said Liz Ranz, junior rugby president. “Every single member of our team strove to improve their skills and make positive contributions in every game, and I have high hopes for both our upcoming spring sea- son, as well as our league season next fall.”

The women’s club lacrosse team also turned in a winning season, while the women’s club soccer team finished with an 8–1–1 record with only a 2–1 loss to Mar- quette as the only exception.

The soccer team qualified for the regional tournament, but fell just short of going to nationals for the second straight year.

With this success in hand, another group of club teams, including men’s hockey, wrestling and water polo, will have an opportunity to continue Dayton’s recent sporting excellence in the winter.
DAYTON BEGINS WINTER ROAD TRIP

Flyers to face stiff competition in tough three-week schedule

CHRIS MOORMAN
Lead Sports Writer

Playing on the road for three weeks might be a problem for some squads, but not for the University of Dayton women’s basketball team.

The Flyers begin their cross-country road trip away from comfortable UD Arena on Saturday, Dec. 11, with a contest against the University of Louisville Cardinals.

Following exam week, the team will then play at the Women of Troy tournament in Los Angeles, competing first against San Diego State University on Saturday, Dec. 18, and then against University of Southern California or the University of Colorado at Boulder the next day.

Staying in California for two extra rest days, the Flyers will conclude their road trip with a match against California State University Bakersfield on Wednesday, Dec. 22. Dayton will then finally play another game in Ohio after Christmas, hosting Harvard University on Thursday, Dec. 30.

The biggest current concern for some of the Flyers is not the road trip, but rather the upcoming finals.

Junior forward Justine Raterman said travelling in the past has increased the stress on her and her teammates because of rearranged exams. Raterman acknowledged this as one of the harder aspects of being a student-athlete, and said she, like most other students, can’t wait for finals to be over.

“It will be nice to go out to the west coast and not have to worry about school,” she said. “On past trips, we were using any spare moment we had to work on some homework and to study, but it will be nice to not have to bring our books with us this time.”

Last season, the Flyers posted a 12-3 road record during the regular season en route to the second round of the NCAA Tournament for the first time in school history. This year’s team has an early 3-1 record away from home, and Raterman said winning on the road isn’t as easy as the Flyers made it last year.

“First and foremost, you really have to stay focused on the reason that we’re going, especially on a trip like this,” she said. “We have a tough schedule out there, and we’re playing a couple of really good teams, and we need to keep that as our first priority.”

Four of the five teams Dayton could play on the road over the coming weeks are in the top 100 of the Ratings Percentage Index, according to collegerpi.com. The RPI is a system that uses game results, home, road and neutral court records, strength of schedule, and opponent strength of schedule to rank all of the NCAA teams.

Head coach Jim Jabir said it’s “the little things off the court that will help the Flyers win while on this trip.”

“We just need to make sure we’re hydrated out there [on the road], well-rested and well-prepared,” Jabir said. “Doing those things will really help us.”

The improving Flyers play on the past three games also will help the team succeed. UD has beaten its last three opponents by a combined total of 74 points, and senior guard Kristin Daugherty said defense has been important to the recent turnaround.

“We come into every game pretty much, knowing all the plays the other team runs, and we talk about it in practice about how we’re going to defend each play,” Daugherty said. “I think because we’re watching and so focused on that, we’re taking [it] and translating it into the game.”

The offense can’t be overlooked, though, as the team’s victory against the University of Toledo on Sunday, Dec. 5, marked the second triple digit scoring effort in UD’s first eight games. Raterman, the team’s leading scorer with 17.1 points per game, said the reason is the new Flyer offense.

“This year we put in a new offensive system, and we’re really running the ball up and down the court,” she said. “We’re taking the first quick shot we can and then crashing the boards with everything we’ve got.”

For the Flyers, these next few games are expected to be competitive points in their hopes of returning to the NCAA Tournament. And that’s what Jabir said his team hoped for this season.

“We have a lot of work to do to get where we want,” he said. “I think we can do it, and these next few games can help us get better. This is what we wanted.”