BEYOND UD

By the time senior year rolls around students are faced with the decision of what to do after graduation. It can be a decision filled with anxiety and fear about what the future will hold. Participating in a year or two of service allows UD grads to continue the community experience, serve the world, and to use their UD education to the fullest.

You will be able to utilize your college education through your work with those in need and use your skills to make a change in the world. In the majority of volunteer programs, volunteers live in community sharing in meals and prayer, work in underserved areas, and become a voice for the voiceless. Most volunteer programs are based on these values: community, service, social justice, and spirituality. Not all programs are explicit about these values but they all embody the qualities of them in some way. Volunteer programs offer many benefits to their volunteers; some include an AmeriCorps award, health insurance, a stipend, all housing and food costs covered along with opportunities for a Masters degree, transportation reimbursement, and a great resume builder. There are hundreds of volunteer programs to choose from that can either be found online at www.cnvs.org or www.pollotticenter.org.

Whatever year you are in school or whatever your place is in life consider if doing a year of service is right for you. You could have an impact on the world around you but you will be amazed at how you grow and change through serving those in need.
