THE MINISTRY OF THE LECTOR

Love Scripture? Have experience or interest in drama or public speaking? If so, God may be calling you to be a Lector at Mass. Lectors proclaim God's Word amidst the gathered assembly at Mass with reverence, passion & skill.

This year, UD launches a new way of preparing Lectors with two important parts. First: a new podcast produced by Campus Ministry called ProclaimerCast. Episodes are short, informative and entertaining. How ought Lectors prepare for their ministry? Why do Lectors bow to the Altar? What is the best approach to proclaiming St. Paul's letters? ProclaimerCast addresses all these questions and more. It's free and available to anyone: subscribe at itunes.udayton.edu (click "launch iTunes", enter your Novell password or click "continue anonymously", scroll down to "UD Life" and click on "Campus Ministry".) Stay subscribed so you'll receive new episodes as they are released.

The second part involves key people to assist you in your ministry. Lector Mentors are adult members of your Mass community who meet with you a few times before Mass when you are scheduled to Lector. They point out strengths (and maybe weaknesses), and help you hone your proclamation skills. The other key contact for Lectors are student Mass Coordinators. They help you with the mechanics (carrying the book in procession, adjusting the microphone, etc.) and get you scheduled to Lector on a regular basis. These key people ensure Lectors have both knowledge and practical skills to make God's Word come alive for the gathered assembly.

Interested in the ministry of the Lector? Contact Emily Strand in Campus Ministry: emily.strand@notes.udayton.edu call 937.229.5750 or stop by Liberty Hall room 215. No experience required!
