The Program for Christian Leadership strives to help students examine the relationship between their faith and vocational choices. They can also explore Christian ministry as their life’s work by taking on leadership roles. In addition, the program enhances the capacity of faculty and staff to teach and mentor students effectively.

For many years, PCL has been a part of the College of Arts and Sciences. Beginning this fall, most PCL programs will operate as a part of Campus Ministry. Both groups will benefit from continuing PCL’s mission and the programming that supports it.

The Chaminade Scholars Program challenges students of any major to explore their Baptismal calling. They are dedicated to their academic and spiritual lives and to the development of Christian leadership skills. All Chaminade Scholars participate in special programs, leadership experiences, and seminars that will be administered by the University Honors Program with support from Campus Ministry.

The Callings Summer Program is an on-campus experience offered to incoming first-year students. During a four-day session in July, students reflect on their gifts and talents, leadership potential, and how God may be calling them to serve.

The Faith, Vocation, and Leadership House is a Special Interest House in the student neighborhood. Its members strive to be an inviting community, challenging themselves and others to grow in faith. Students intentionally explore vocation, and seek to live in a way consistent with their faith traditions through active discernment of God’s will.
