James P. Goode, deputy assistant secretary of the Air Force, will address the graduates of a two-week management development program at the University of Dayton Thursday (Sept. 4).

The graduates, all Air Force personnel, comprise the second "class" to complete the intensive course, designed especially for them by the University's division of specialized educational services. This group numbers 115. Another 100 completed the course in June.

Other speakers at a graduation banquet in the University cafeteria will be the Very Rev. Andrew L. Seebold, S.M., University president; Brig.-Gen. M. R. Tidwell, Jr., chief, Staff Judge Advocate office at Air Material Command, representing Gen. E. W. Rawlings; and Col. W. R. Grohs, vice commander of Wright Air Development Center, representing Maj.-Gen. S. T. Wray, WADC commander.

An alumnus of the Yale School of Law, Mr. Goode is a member of the Connecticut Bar and the Bar of the United States Supreme Court. In 1935, he was commissioned by Justice William O. Douglas to a special assignment with the Securities and Exchange Commission and later served as an attorney with that organization and became assistant director of the Corporation Finance division.

During World War II, he served with the Army Air Corps from the rank of first lieutenant to colonel, receiving the Legion of Merit.

Mr. Goode was appointed in 1951 to the office of the assistant secretary of the Air Force where he is primarily responsible for the formulation and supervision of policies governing operation of the Department of the Air Force manpower, personnel and organization programs.
