Nov 10th, 8:30 AM

A New Future? The Catholic Church, Grassroots Justice, and Accountability

Regina Menachery Paulose
A Contrario International Criminal Law, reginapaulose@aol.com

Follow this and additional works at: http://ecommons.udayton.edu/human_rights

Part of the Criminal Law Commons, International Law Commons, and the Law and Society Commons

http://ecommons.udayton.edu/human_rights/2017/faithbased/2

This Event is brought to you for free and open access by the Human Rights Center at eCommons. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Social Practice of Human Rights: Charting the Frontiers of Research and Advocacy by an authorized administrator of eCommons. For more information, please contact frice1@udayton.edu, mschlagen1@udayton.edu.
Research Panel: Faith-Based Perspectives

Presenter: Regina Menachery Paulose, A Contrario International Criminal Law

Title: A New Future? The Catholic Church, Grassroots Justice, and Accountability

Abstract:

Between the 1970s and 1980s, Guatemalans, particularly the indigenous populations, were targets of a state-sponsored genocide. Several years after the genocide, Catholic Bishop Juan Gerardi of Guatemala City took the lead in creating the Recovery of Historical Memory Project, which was an independent investigation into the events of the genocide. Gerardi was murdered before the report was made public. This paper will briefly discuss Gerardi’s work and his contribution to local justice in Guatemala. The author will then explore what contributions the Catholic Church could make in creating similar fact-finding missions. Could a grassroots mechanism such as the one Gerardi created be a more effective response in particular situations, given the political gridlock of local and national governments? This paper will explore this question and utilize an ongoing situation to examine whether it could be more effective than a government body.

About the presenter:

Regina Menachery Paulose, an international criminal law and human rights attorney, earned a J.D. at Seattle University School of Law (2004) and an LL.M. at the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute at the University of Torino (2012).