Congressman Charles W. Whalen, Jr. (R-Ohio) announced today that he has scheduled a meeting at 9:30 a.m. tomorrow with the key parties in the National Cash Register Company union representation dispute.

Whalen said the meeting would be open and its purpose "to clarify where the situation stands at the moment and where we go from here."

Invitations have been extended to the National Cash Register Company, the Employees Independent Union, the International Union of Electrical Workers, and the National Labor Relations Board (Cincinnati office).

All but the NLRB have indicated that representatives will attend.

The NLRB trial examiner earlier this week recommended that the disputed January union representation elections be set aside and a new election held.
