What's on the economic horizon for 1960 and beyond? What's the latest on credit investigation? What's new in credit and collection procedures?

These are a few of the many questions to be treated at the fourth annual Credit Conference in Dayton, Ohio, Feb. 3. Jointly sponsored by the Dayton Association of Credit Men, the Dayton Credit Women's Club, and the University of Dayton, the one-day program will feature seven authorities and a number of panel discussions on topics of current interest to the credit man. The conference again will take place on the Dayton campus.

Speakers will include Dr. Thomas J. Hailstones, director of Business Administration programs at Xavier University, Cincinnati. He will open the program with an "Economic Forecast--1960 and Beyond." "Credit Investigation" is a topic to be handled by Meril A. May, vice president of Dun and Bradstreet's fourth region (Cleveland).

Richard F. Wenzel, assistant cashier at Dayton's Third National Bank and Trust Company, will give an "Analysis of Financial Data."

The Honorable Charles W. Whalen, Jr., Montgomery County (Dayton) representative to the Ohio General Assembly and chairman of the University of Dayton's department of retailing, will chair a panel on "A Uniform Ohio Commercial Code" and what it will mean to the credit manager. Joining Mr. Whalen in discussing this code will be Boris Auerbach, attorney for the Ohio State Bar Association; Gerald J. Celebrezze, assistant attorney general, state of Ohio; and William Milligan, attorney and member of the Ohio General Assembly's House Judiciary Committee, which has been studying such a bill.
Afternoon sessions of the conference will lead off with a panel discussion of "problem accounts." Leading this presentation will be Mr.
Barb Simpson, vice president and director of credit sales, the American Lubricants Company. He will be joined by R. J. Leaman, credit manager for Chrysler Airemp.

T. Frank Hardesty, managing consultant of Marysville, Ohio, will speak on "Handling of Marginal Accounts" and Dayton attorney Thomas B.
Talbot will discuss "Creditors' Rights."

"Credit and Collection Procedures" will be treated by F. A. King, credit manager of the Inland Container Corporation, Indianapolis, Ind., to bring the conference to a close.

A nominal registration fee of $15, which includes lunch on the campus, is planned for the annual conference. Further information, programs, and registration forms may be obtained from The Division of Specialized Educational Services, University of Dayton, Dayton 9, Ohio.
