2005

Author Identification

Follow this and additional works at: http://ecommons.udayton.edu/bcca

Part of the Higher Education Commons, Interpersonal and Small Group Communication Commons, Mass Communication Commons, Other Communication Commons, and the Speech and Rhetorical Studies Commons

Recommended Citation

Available at: http://ecommons.udayton.edu/bcca/vol17/iss1/12
Author Identifications

Javette Grace Hayes grew up in Kansas City, Missouri. She earned her BA from William Jewell College (Liberty, MO), her MS from Illinois State University (Normal, IL), and her Ph.D. from Northwestern University (Evanston, IL). She is currently an Assistant Professor in the Department of Human Communication Studies at California State University, Fullerton. Her teaching and research interests are Interpersonal and Relational Communication and Instructional Communication.

Stephen K. Hunt (Ph.D., Southern Illinois University, 1998) is an Associate Professor and Co-Director of the basic communication course at Illinois State University. His research interests include the communication needs of students at-risk, students’ learning/cognitive styles, and training/mentoring graduate students.

Rodney K. Marshall (Ph.D. University of Tennessee, 2001) is an Assistant Professor of Communication Studies at Eastern Illinois University, Charleston, IL 61920. The author wishes to thank the Communication Studies Department at The University of Tennessee for their assistance in this study.

Kevin R. Meyer (B.S.E., Emporia State University, 1993) is a Graduate Teaching Assistant and General Education Assistant for the basic communication course working on his Masters degree at Illinois State University. His research interests include training of graduate teaching assistants, instructional communication, classroom management, graded participation, plagiarism, and team sport apologia and image repair.

David R. Novak (M.S., Illinois State University, 2001) is a Ph.D. student in the School of Communication Studies at Ohio University and Assistant Basic Course Director for the 2004-2005 school year. His main area of research is in organizational communication with emphasis on alternative organizing strategies, community formation and organizational democracy. He also researches organizational and classroom uses of technology.

Allison N. Rattenborg (M.S., Illinois State University) is a Lecturer at Illinois State University. Her research interests include instructional communication, student engagement, and issues related to the basic communication course.

Julie L. Semlak is working on her Masters degree at Illinois State University, where she is a Graduate Teaching Assistant. Her research interests include at-risk students, instructional communication, and the training of high school communication teachers.

Cheri J. Simonds (Ph.D., University of Oklahoma) is an Associate Professor and Co-Director of the basic course in communication at Illinois State University. She has co-authored a book on classroom communication and has published articles on teacher clarity and challenge behavior in the college classroom. Her major research interests include graduate student training and development, evaluation issues, and assessment.

Paul D. Turman (Ph.D., University of Nebraska-Lincoln, 2000) is an assistant professor at the University of Northern Iowa. He is the co-coordinator of the basic course in charge of curriculum development and training for graduate teaching assistants. Paul’s area of research focuses on a combination of interpersonal communication, instructional communication and instructional training.

Amy Rochelle Wolfsen (M.A., Washington State University, 2003) is a graduate student and teaching fellow at the University of Utah. This paper was part of her thesis research. Her current research is in the areas of communication education and academic integrity. The author would like to thank Joe and Francis Ayres for their help and support with this project. An earlier version of this paper was presented at the National Communication Association Convention, Miami, 2004.

Michelle T. Violanti (Ph.D. University of Kansas, 1995) is an Associate Professor in the Communication Studies Department at The University of Tennessee, Knoxville, TN 37996. The author wishes to thank the Communication Studies Department at The University of Tennessee for their assistance in this study.