Author Biographies

John R. Baldwin (Ph.D., Arizona State University) is Associate Professor at Illinois State University, focusing on intercultural communication and qualitative research methods. His research and teaching interests include domestic and international diversity, especially issues of group difference and (in)tolerance. He has journal articles and book chapters in intercultural communication readers, as well as a recent co-edited books introducing communication theories and analyzing scholarly definitions of culture.

Melissa Broeckelman (M.A., Kansas State University, 2005) is a teaching and research assistant and doctoral student in the School of Communication Studies at Ohio University. Her teaching and research interests focus primarily on the intersections between theory and learning, with emphases on dialogic teaching methods, the use of peer workshops and collaborative learning, and academic integrity in higher education.

Mark E. Comadena (Ph.D, Purdue University, 1981) is a Professor of Communication and Director of Graduate Studies at Illinois State University where he teaches graduate and undergraduate courses in communication research methods and nonverbal communication. His research explores classroom communication processes, including the effects of teacher verbal and nonverbal behaviors on student learning.
Author Biographies

Roberta A. Davilla (Ph.D., Ohio University) is Associate Professor of Communication Studies at the University of Northern Iowa. She was graduate coordinator for the Department of Communication Studies from 2001-2005 and was the 2003-2004 president of Central States Communication Association. She has served on a number of editorial boards including The Journal of Family Communication, Communication Teacher, and Communication Studies and was editor of the Iowa Journal of Communication.

Karen Kangas Dwyer (Ph.D., University of Nebraska, Lincoln, 1995) is a Professor of Speech Communication and Basic Course Director at the University of Nebraska at Omaha. She has authored textbooks, instructor's manuals, and several articles related to the basic communication course, instructional communication, and communication anxiety. She has won university and state teaching awards. Her work has included developing and teaching special public speaking classes and workshops for highly apprehensive communicators, as well as developing a graduate program in human resources and training. She has co-authored a Dutch public speaking trade book.

Melissa Hailer (M.A., Southern Illinois University Edwardsville, 2004). During her master’s program, Melissa worked as the Director of the Speech Center and conducted a review of Speaking Across the Curriculum programs.

Marlina M. Howe (M.A., University of Nebraska, Omaha, 2005) is the Speech Center Consulting Coordinnator and an Instructor of Speech Communication at the University of Nebraska at Omaha. She teaches in the First Year Experience program that integrates college success strategies into the public speaking classroom. In addition, she is the faculty development assistant administrator at the university. Her research interests include speech anxiety, basic course assessment, and instructional communication.

Stephen K. Hunt (Ph.D., Southern Illinois University, 1998) is an Associate Professor and Co-Director of the basic communication course at Illinois State University. He has published articles on several topics including instructional communication, persuasion, and communication pedagogy. His major research interests include communication assessment, the communication needs of students at-risk, students’ learning/cognitive styles, compliance-gaining, and training/mentoring graduate students.

Natalie J. Kussart (M.A., Illinois State University, 2004) is currently a law student at Southern Illinois University. Her legal interests include health law, estate planning, and corporate law. While studying communication, her research interests included instructional communication, communication education, compliance-gaining, and mass media.

Kevin R. Meyer (M.S., Illinois State University, 2005) is a doctoral student at Ohio University. His research interests include instructional communication, communication education, basic course pedagogy, graduate teaching assistant training programs, and sports league apologia/image repair.

Paul J. Siddens III (Ph.D., Southern Illinois University, 1989) is an Associate Professor of Communication Studies at the University of Northern Iowa. He teaches in the areas of Performance Studies, Interpersonal Communication and the Basic Communication course. His published work focuses on staging literature, using film in the classroom, and other aspects of communication and performance pedagogy. His primary research/creative activities focus on investigating the relationships between human communication and technology, and working as a Producer/Technical Director/Designer for the UNI Interpreters Theatre.

Brent K. Simonds (Ed.D., Illinois State University, 2003) is an assistant professor in the School of Communication at Illinois State University with research interests and publications in visual communication and interactive media. He is also an award winning filmmaker.

Cheri J. Simonds (Ph.D., University of Oklahoma) is an Associate Professor of Communication at Illinois State University. She teaches in the area of communication education and has published articles on teacher clarity, challenge behavior, portfolio assessment, and evaluation fidelity. She co-authors textbooks on Classroom Communication, Intercultural Communication, and Public Speaking.
Author Biographies

Lesa A. Stern is Associate Professor of Speech Communication at Southern Illinois University Edwardsville. Her primary research interests include conflict management and assessment practices in communication, whereas her teaching interests include the gamut of interpersonal communication, research, and theory courses. Other interests include sunny beaches, good wine, and sparkling conversation.

Lisa Theisen (M.A., University of Northern Iowa, 2005) taught the basic communication course at the University of Northern Iowa while completing her master’s degree. Here research focuses on the strategies graduate teaching assistants use to obtain social support and the implications for such strategies on GTA instructional and scholarly development. Lisa is currently an admissions representative at Tucson College, Tucson, AZ.