New Business
• Draft Cost-Share Policy from VP for Research: Paul Benson
  o When indirect costs are waived, the VP for Research have no involvement in the decision. Right now 1.5-2 million dollars are covered by the Provost’s office. Through discussion with the Dean’s this policy evolved as it stands. Some of these waived indirect costs are actually funding outside agents that don’t advance faculty scholarship.
  o The proposal creates a more meaningful environment to advance the priorities of the university.
  o The policy as proposed sets up a circumstance where a Dean’s office, the VP for Research, and the Provost’s office can convene to strategically invest in research.
  o This policy is a first step in building an infrastructure for strategic investment in research.
  o The policy assumes scholarship and cost-shares are sometimes difficult and the timeliness is also important and this policy does not seem to address these issues.
    ▪ The intent is to improve the expediting these discussions around cost-shares and to promote the collaboration for Deans.
  o The criteria for cost sharing on page 2 of the draft policy: does the policy create an opportunity for disparity in naming junior faculty in the policy.
• The issue is really pressing when there are large dollars on the table; the purpose of this piece of the policy is to support new initiatives and to assess where the University wants to build the research capacity for new areas of research.
• The question is about the strategic use of research dollars at the University.
  o The PI is responsible to attain signatures and obtain cost-share; the negotiation involved is quite onerous especially when there is a team involved.
  o We need to work on the language on the responsibilities of the PI.
  o Private foundations that are funded will be handled as gifts so as to avoid the charging of indirec ts.
