Should Syllabi and Course Materials be Faculty Intellectual Property?

Follow this and additional works at: https://ecommons.udayton.edu/stander_posters

Part of the Arts and Humanities Commons, Business Commons, Education Commons, Engineering Commons, Life Sciences Commons, Medicine and Health Sciences Commons, Physical Sciences and Mathematics Commons, and the Social and Behavioral Sciences Commons

Recommended Citation

https://ecommons.udayton.edu/stander_posters/683

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by the Stander Symposium at eCommons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Stander Symposium Posters by an authorized administrator of eCommons. For more information, please contact frice1@udayton.edu, mschlangen1@udayton.edu.
Should Syllabi and Course Materials be Faculty Intellectual Property?

Reece E. Newman

Advisor: Michele M. Welkener

Conceptual Questions

1. What social rules and policies, if any, should govern syllabi and course materials in higher education?
2. If property social rules and policies should govern, should they be intellectual property social rules and policies?
3. If they should be intellectual property social rules and policies, should they be common, collective, or private?
4. If they should be private intellectual property social rules and policies, should they be private to particular individuals such as faculty, to particular higher education institutions, or to both?

Definitions

- Property
- Intellectual property
  - Types
    - Nonrivalrousness
    - Nonscarcity
  - Common intellectual property
  - Collective intellectual property
  - Private intellectual property

Arguments for Private Intellectual Property

- Consequentialist
- Deontological
- Social Contractarian
- Social Contractualist
- Virtue Ethics

Arguments for Institutional Private Intellectual Property

- Individual Personality
- Individual Incentives
- Lockean

Arguments for Individual Private Intellectual Property

- Individual Personality
- Individual Incentives
- “Lockean”

Arguments for Both

- Individual Personality and Institutional Culture
- Individual and Institutional Incentives
- Lockean and “Lockean”

Answer: It all depends