New Evidence.

In 1933, BNA first published The United States Law Week. The quality of the service -- the comprehensive, accurate, in-depth coverage — was self-evident from the very first issue. Clearly, a new standard had been set in legal reporting and research.

Now, BNA announces a new, enhanced Law Week — redesigned for today's attorneys. The crisp, quick-read format helps save time. The new Legal News component expands our coverage of non-decisional legal developments. And Case Alert, a quick-read summary and analysis of significant court opinions, includes links to the full text.

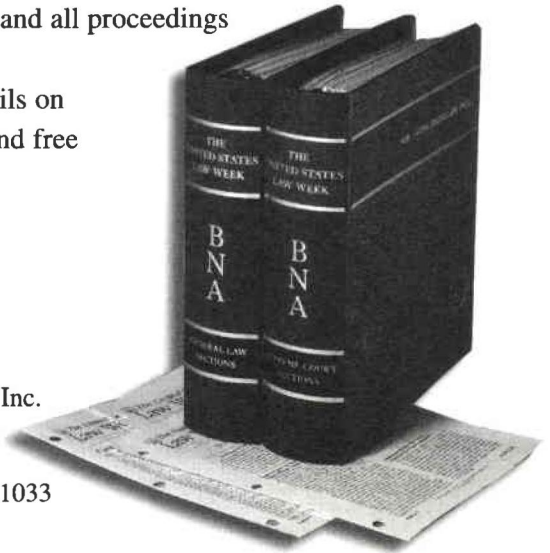

With access via the Web now available, you can choose the format, print or electronic, that works best for you. What's more, a new near real-time Supreme Court docket system — U.S. Law Week's Supreme Court Today — is now available via the Web.

Now more than ever, Law Week is the standard of quality. It remains America's primary resource for significant new federal and state decisions and all proceedings in the U.S. Supreme Court.

Ask your professor for details on Law Week's low student rates, and free Case Alert, today.

University of Dayton Law Review —Dedicatory Year Volume

Joseph E. Keller Hall, dedicated in the fall of 1997, is the new home for the University of Dayton School of Law. Offering a technologically sophisticated learning environment, Keller Hall is among the finest law school facilities built to date. 1,400 data and power outlets located in Keller Hall provide ready access to the Law School Network and a wealth of on-line resources.

The design of Keller Hall emphasizes teacher-student interaction, providing a variety of spaces conducive to formal and informal learning. The law library provides students with a variety of seating and study options, with access from each study space to the computer network. The Mathias Heck Courtroom seats up to 200 students or spectators and will accommodate both real and mock trials.

With an overall cost of $23 million, Keller Hall will enhance the School's tradition of preparing highly qualified lawyers.
