Self-study details university progress

KARL FORNES
NEWS EDITOR

The North Central Accreditation Evaluation team will be on campus from Nov. 16 to Nov. 18. An open session with students and administration will take place Nov. 17.

According to Joseph

Stander S.M., vice president for academic affairs and provost, the visit is part of a ten-year cycle to determine the university's accreditation.

"This is different from the professional groups," Stander said. "They are evaluators. They not only point out problems, they also give recommendations.

"They may call students on an informal basis," he continued.

Stander submitted a 500 page self-study of UD to the eight-member evaluation team.

The preface of the study states, "This report is written with the intent of capturing the strengths of the university, charting its growth and development since the last total institutional visit in 1978, and identifying its opportunities and challenges for the next decade."

In 1977 the university established a set of objectives to accomplish by this time.

These goals included "continued improvement of the quality and attractiveness of the university, ... services to and rapport with the Dayton community, ... aggressive promotion of graduate enrollment and ... upgrading academic programs."

According to the 1987 self-study, "the only major 1977 goal that was abandoned is the goal to develop new sources of students over the age of 24."

The self-study accounted this to the presence and competitiveness of Sinclair Community College and Wright State University.

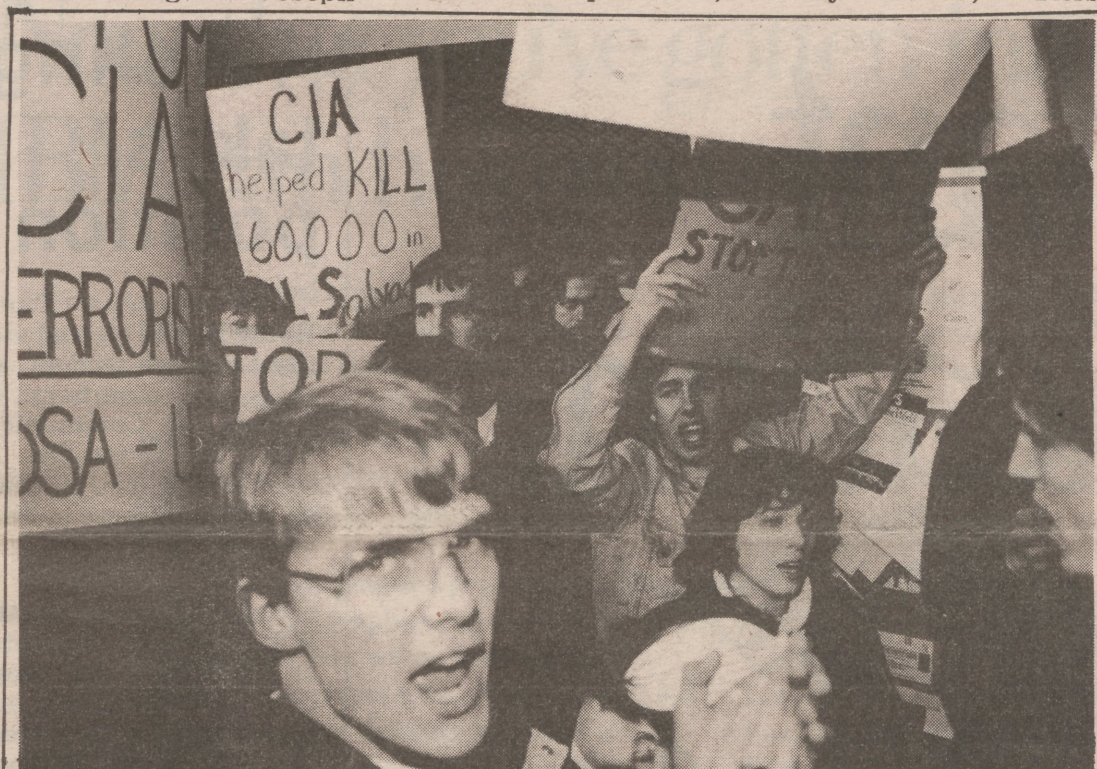

"The university has consequently downplayed its role in the area of continuing education."

The self-study continues by introducing the revival of the Academic Senate and a new, "evolving" budgeting mechanism as "two major and extremely important changes in the university governance."

As a result of these changes, "The university is in a far better position to meet the challenges of the future than it was ten years ago."

Stander said the self-study is an honest and accurate assessment of the university's progress the past ten years.

"The report that they (the evaluation team) have is candid and complete," he concluded.

Student activists demonstrate

50 to 80 members of Plowshares for Peace and Democratic Socialists of America protested CIA recruitment at the Jesse Philips Center Tuesday. The students stressed that they were protesting the CIA's methods, not its existence. Members of College Republicans were on hand to show their support of the CIA.

Association initiates changes at the Gardens

Under the direction of Sharon Austin, advisor, and Pamela Chapman, director of Garden Apartments, the Garden Apartment Association has a brand new look.

One of the more noticeable changes lies in the organization of the governing body. The GAA has an executive board of directors this year instead of the traditional officers.

The board is comprised of Chief Executive Officer Jeff Ditmire, and five directors: Steve Gunderson, Pat Brennan, Dan Pfeiffer, Jeff Staab and Scott Szutak. The GAA also has an assembly made up of 11 building representatives and seven resident assistants.

The GAA has already participated in a number of activities this year including the International Tea and Students Without a Parking Space (SWAPS).

"We're a service organization for the Garden Apartment residents," said Ditmire. "Because of that we feel we should cater to their needs as much as possible."

"I think that we have a great start already this year, especially with SWAPS, the International Tea and the Halloween Cook-out," he added.

Each resident is required to pay a $5 activity fee upon check-in. The fee covers GAA activities.

"We have a budget of around $2,000 to work with," said Gunderson, "and we want to pump back every cent to Garden Apartment residents. After all, it's their activity fee."

According to Ditmire, the GAA has designs to obtain new address labels for the apartment buildings and also to put the constitution through a revision.

Speakers evaluate Soviet reforms

KARL FORNES
NEWS EDITOR

Soviet Premier Mikhail Gorbachev's proposals for Russian political and economic reform will be discussed Tuesday at 8 p.m. in O'Leary Auditorium.

The forum, entitled "Glasnost and Perestroika," will critique the proposed reforms, evaluate their opposition and discuss their possible effect on life in the Soviet Union.

Philip D. Stewart, professor of political science at Ohio State University and Richard W. Judy, director of the center for Soviet and east European research at Hudson Institute will present their views.

Both Stewart and Judy have studied at Moscow State University and traveled extensively in the USSR.

"These two are experts," said Sharon Conway, administrative assistant at UD's Center for International Studies.

"They will discuss the tentative reforms and the reforms that are taking place, if they're working and how they work," she continued.

Jaro Bilocerkowycz, political science professor at UD, will moderate the discussion.

The program is the second in the "Europe: East and West" series cosponsored by the Center for International Studies and the Dayton Council of World Affairs.

A follow-up program has been scheduled for March 1988 and will deal with the foreign policy implications of the reform movement.

The event is free and open to the public.

The Office of Minority Affairs, in preparation for the Thanksgiving holiday, will hold an afternoon worship service on Sunday at 3 p.m. in the UD chapel.

The Rev. Robert Jones of the College Hill Church Chapel will lead the service. Debbie Moore, director of Minority Student Affairs, said the worship is opened to members of any faith and encourages the university community to attend.

The gospel choir will perform in the service. The Fall Harvest-Fellowship dinner will be in the Minority Students' Lounge in O'Reilly Hall immediately after the prayer service.

"Not only is Thanksgiving a time for giving thanks, it's also a time for sharing blessings," said Tim Spraggins, of the Office of Minority Affairs.

Additional upcoming minority-sponsored events include a panel discussion on Nov. 16, at 7 p.m. in the Minority Students' Lounge.

Victor McCarley, a Dayton clinical psychologist, will speak about black male/female relationships. The discussion will focus on the problems of and reactions to interracial dating, the subject of sex and intimacy and the myths of the black male.

Ski Colorado Club to race, socialize

PAMELA GEIS

Ski Club members have the chance to "Ski Vail" during the annual ski trip.

Students will visit a ski lodge in Winter Park, Colorado from Dec. 26 to Jan. 3. As part of the trip package, club members may travel to the popular resort of Vail, Colo. for a one-day ski excursion.

The entire trip will cost each individual $389 plus spending money. After students make the initial required $75 down payment, they may use the remainder of the semester to pay the bill in full using "chip away," or installment, plan.

Every student is assured condominium lodging suited for four to six persons, a five-day lift ticket, and discounts on rental equipment.

Club officers predict that a full busload, or 44 students, will participate. The travel

Helbling takes position

UD student Terri Helbling was elected vice president of student affairs by members of Women in Communications, Inc. at the Oct. 10 annual National Professional Conference in Minneapolis.

Helbling has served the WICI UD campus chapter as president, vice president and publicity chair. She was also the Great Lakes Student Liaison.

Helbling is currently an intern at NCR and has been an intern at the Children's Medical Center in Dayton.

Helbling has received several scholarships and was a speaker at the UD leadership seminar.

package includes snowboarding, sleigh rides, hot air balloon rides and both cross country and downhill skiing.

Students may also participate in two specialized downhill skiing races during the course of the trip. Each skier will be timed and ranked. Only UD students may take part.

So that members may get to know each other, the club will hold a wine and cheese party upon arrival in Winter Park.

"As a freshman, I met a lot of seniors. If they had a party (at school) it would open up my social life altogether," said Karen Kowalski, Ski Club vice president.

Because trip participants will celebrate the New Year together, Kowalski said that a "champagne party is already in the making."

Kowalski has a positive outlook for the Ski Club this year. Officers plan a night out at Flanagan's before December for those who will go on the trip to Colorado. In February, the club will possibly sponsor a three-day outing to Snowshoe.

Now that you've gotten into Dayton, IBM can help you get more out of it.

The road to graduation is paved with term papers, lab reports, cramming, all-nighters and, of course, exams.

To ease that journey and awaken your professors to your exceptional abilities, we suggest the newest member of the IBM® Personal System/2™ family: the Model 25 Collegiate.

It's a high-powered personal computer with advanced graphics capabilities, designed to fit on your desk without adding to the clutter. And it comes with a generous 640 KB memory, two 3.5" diskette drives and an aid package every student can appreciate—a big discount, plus Microsoft® Windows 1.04, Write, Paint, Cardfile, IBM DOS 3.3 and a mouse.

Pop in the load-and-go diskette and your Model 25 Collegiate is set to help you write and revise long papers and illustrate your points by combining words and graphics. So your professors will draw favorable conclusions about your work.

Parking petition effective way to solve problem

Recently, Students Without A Parking Space delivered a petition to William Schuerman, vice president for student life and dean of students.

The petition had over 400 signatures and a number of ideas to help improve the parking situation.

This petition is definitely a step in the right direction.

The university has to face the fact that many students, especially juniors and seniors, have cars. And juniors and seniors are the majority of the students who live in the Garden Apartments.

In fact, some of the suggestions on the petition have already been put into effect.

SWAPS should be commended for the mature and effective way that the problem was handled.

Other campus groups should follow the example set by SWAPS when they are faced with a problem.

CIA demonstration

Groups disruptive, aggressive during interviews

Tuesday, Nov. 10, Plowshares for Peace demonstrated outside the Jesse Philips Center because the Central Intelligence Agency was recruiting at UD.

While students involved in Plowshares have the right to their opinions and to protest peacefully, other students have the right to interview with any organization they choose.

Plowshares tried to prevent the interviews, but they should have honored all students' rights to pursue their goals, even if that includes interviewing with the CIA.

Interviewing is a very important process for most seniors, and an interview with the CIA has the potential to change some students' lives.

Plowshares had no business interfering in the process or jeopardizing interviews by their protests.

By acting in an aggressive manner, the protest defeated Plowshares' own purpose: peace in the world.

Dating complicated

"You love her/but she loves him/and he loves somebody else/you just can't win..." — J. Geills

KEVIN ROWAN
COLUMNIST

For a devious but ethical guy like myself, it seems the concept of dating, let alone starting a relationship, is getting more complicated with each tick of the biological clock.

Having attained the ripe age of 21 I realize that my life, up until the last two years or so, has been amazingly devoid of quality companionship. That is, I've dated as often as a cadaver.

Now part of this is due to my almost illegal capacity for shyness, but when you get right down to it (as it were) a more fundamental problem is trying to figure out the female sex.

I had the only quality relationship of my life (so far) two summers ago with a girl who, even though we've broken up, still means a lot to me.

While we were together she never had one complaint about me and considered me a host of adjectives my humility doesn't permit me to list. She basically told me to never change and so I didn't. And she left me. Now maybe it's just me, but it seems there is something flagrantly wrong in there somewhere.

I occasionally consult with my friends who are confused by similar actions. They, too, wonder just what in the heck is going on. They sit down and try to figure out what a young lady is thinking and this is just asking for trouble. Men have been trying to figure that one out for damn well near a millennium with little success and virtually only one conclusion: it cannot be done.

The signs of this confusion are quite noticeable on many of the young men on campus. Signs such as a tendency to drool ever so slightly when a winsome other accidentally brushes against his shoulder; a realization that he has just spent the last five minutes daydreaming while unconsciously staring at a lady (this one makes the guy look like a real dweeb); and the proclivity of a guy to start three sentences without finishing one of them when in the presence of a lady he has never met before. This is commonly known as babbling.

However, I've found the best way to start something is not to go looking for it. Chances are you'll get hurt or laughed at if you do. (Of course some guys are into being hurt and laughed at, but that's their problem.) It's best to just sit back and look lonely and something will come your way, I promise you. It's worked several times for me in the past and it's well worth the wait because something that comes your way tends to last longer. Isn't that nice?

By the way, the ladies at 223 K St. would each like a candlelit dinner. Serious inquiries only.

Director pleased by awareness

National Alcohol Awareness Week was Oct. 18 to 23, 1987, and the response by UD students to that program was very gratifying.

The numbers look very good: 252 attended the kick-off party, 1,121 signed the pledge to try to be responsible with alcohol, about 100 attended the educational programs and about 250 attended the alternative lawn party.

In addition, 57 organizations endorsed the week.

I hope that students will try to be responsible throughout the rest of the year if they choose to drink.

I would like to express my deepest appreciation to the many organizations and individuals who donated their time and effort to make Alcohol Awareness Week a success.

Radio needs variety of music

It seems that our campus radio station, WDCR, plays only one type of music: progressive.

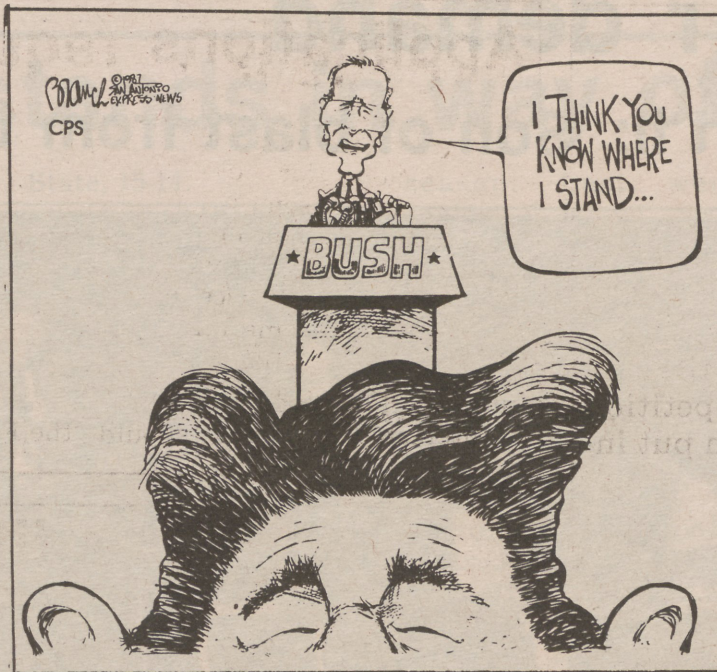

WDCR

I do not have a problem with this music getting airplay because it does appeal to many college students.

But, it does not appeal to all. I believe that one or two hours a week, late at night, of classical, blues or art rock music is not enough to get a taste of it.

Classical, blues and jazz are still active fields of music. They deserve a little more credit and recognition than WDCR is giving them.

Stuart TV needs repair

Stuart Hall has a television in the main lounge of the residence hall that is available to all residents.

However, two of three tubes in the set as well as a controller box do not work. They have not worked properly all year.

Now the picture is barely visible.

So why not fix it?

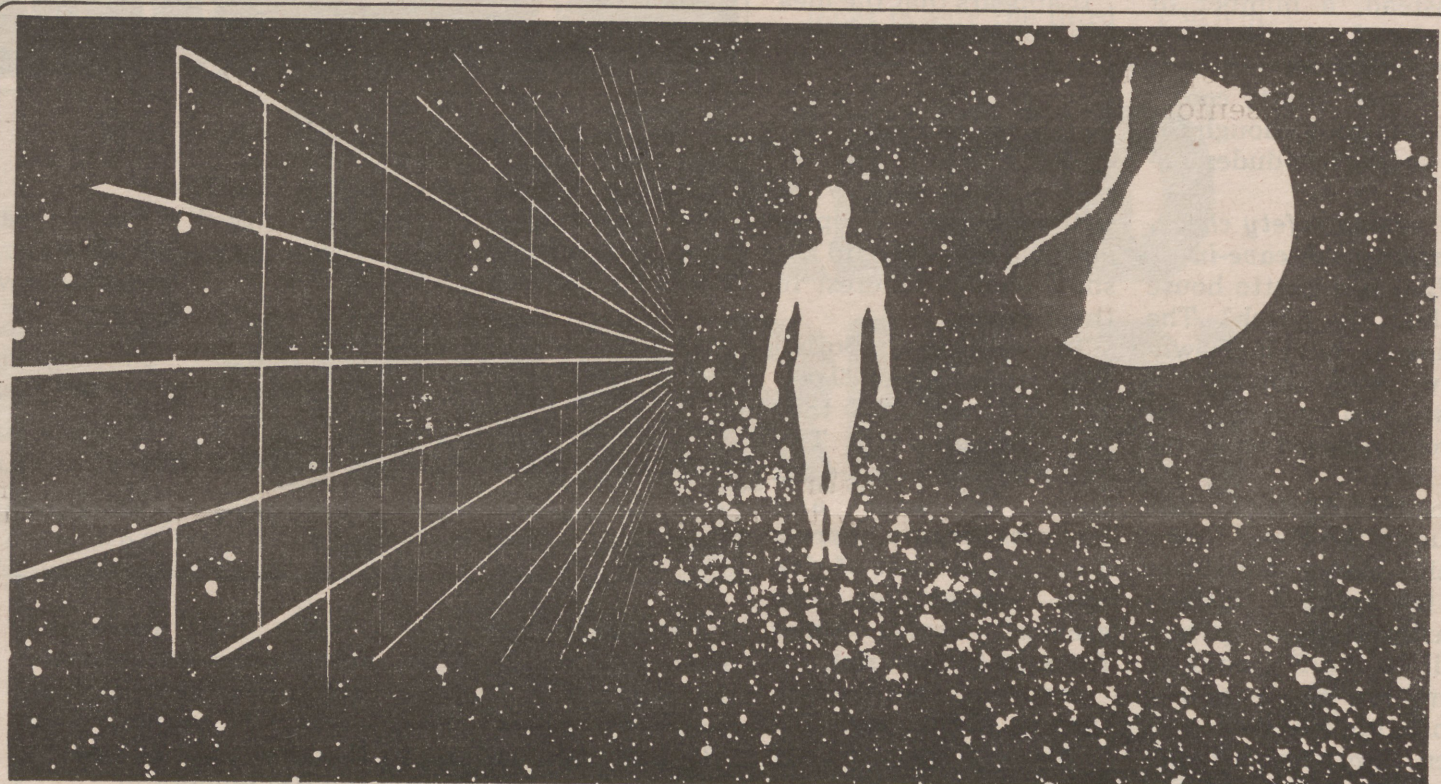

The housing office has had a repairman look at the television three times, but he only estimated the cost of repairs.

The problem was first reported by staff members of Stuart Hall in the second week of August, before any students had arrived.

Considering the money we spend at UD, the services should be greater than those that have been rendered so far.

You Have the Answers.

The real-world problems of government, industry and commerce demand solutions. Quick, effective solutions. TASC solutions.

For over two decades, TASC has applied innovative, computer-based analytic methodologies to the understanding and optimization of complex systems. We're committed to putting knowledge to work in unconventional ways. The possibilities are endless. And they depend on people like you. People with the independent thought and analytic abilities that have fostered at TASC a unique combination of advanced technology and problem-solving techniques.

Here, we offer a small-team environment, project follow-through, interdisciplinary contacts and in-house educational opportunities. Our project diversity calls for flexibility, objectivity, and the ability to expand your knowledge in a variety of ways to discover real answers to complex systems problems.

Academically, 75% of our staff are at the MS and PhD level. And we provide them with superior technical and administrative support and the latest computer hardware/software. We use state-of-the-art methods from estimation, control and optimization theory to advanced modeling and simulation techniques — many of which were developed at TASC. It's a dynamic, challenging environment where the individual makes a difference. And we have openings in Boston, Washington D.C., and Dayton.

If you're receiving an MS or PhD in Electrical Engineering, Computer Science or Operations Research, the world could use the answers you can provide through TASC.

TASC will be interviewing on-campus shortly, and will also host an information meeting on the evening before our interview. See your placement office for details.

Blast from the past part II: Son of blast from the past

Yes, it's back by overwhelming demand! If you liked the original "Blast from the past," you'll love "Son of blast from the past."

To be honest, I didn't expect to get the responses I did. I thought I might get the usual "Argh!" or "Hummm . . .," but I didn't.

Instead, a number of people (I think there were about seven) told me it was "pretty cool." Seven is good enough for me, so like hey dudes, enjoy!

Housing safety checked after porch cave-in What is a ghetto house without a porch? The residents of 115 Lawnview Ave. found out first-hand when their porch collapsed on March 30, 1979.

In the April 3, 1979 issue of the Flyer News, Elaine Porter, a resident of the house's upstairs apartment, said "It was wall to wall people up there (on the porch). I don't think anyone was even jumping up and down and somehow or other the porch floor caved in."

No one was hurt during the cave-in and the university even footed a bill for the three residents to stay at La Quinta Motel until repairs could be completed.

This should be a warning to students who live in ghetto houses that have floors that bounce when you walk across them: if you have a party and fall through the floor, remember, La Quinta is a long walk from Miriam Hall.

Pub a worthwhile venture

This editorial is from the same issue of the Flyer News.

It appears that the idea of a campus pub was proposed back in 1979. However, the Student Life Council rejected the idea because they felt it could not survive without outside support and that students did not show enough interest in the idea.

The editorial polled 1,151 students and 89 percent of them said they wanted a pub. The editorial also pointed out that, as with any business venture, there is a certain amount of risk and sometimes the greatest success comes from the biggest risk.

It appears that the timing is right and the university has finally decided to take the risk. The new pub benefits the students who drink there, the students who work there and the rest of the university as well.

Ithaca stands in way of playoff berth

TONY REISZ
ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

The University of Dayton football team will host the Blue Bombers of Ithaca this week for what could be considered the first game of the playoffs for the Flyers.

The Flyers need this victory to ensure a berth in this year's Division III playoffs.

Dayton comes off a victory last week over Drake University that upped its record to 7-2 on the season.

The Flyers also reclaimed a position in the NCAA's top twenty poll, capturing the 14th spot. They also moved back up to the fourth spot in the North Region rankings. Only the top four teams in each region earn a playoff berth.

Augustana, Wabash, and Hiram are the top three seeds in the region.

Ithaca enters this regular season finale with a seven game winning streak. The Bombers only loss came in their opening game to Albany

State, 15-14.

Last week the Bombers were ranked fifth in the Division III poll, but they moved up into the number four spot this week.

Ithaca is mainly a running team, with the offense ranked sixth in rushing in Division III coming into Saturday's game with Dayton.

The ground attack is lead by junior running back Mike Scott. Scott has rushed for 697 yards and 10 TD's on the season. Last week against Cortland, Scott scored three TD's and rushed for 142 yards on just eight carries, including a 70 yard touchdown run.

Out of the backfield, Scott is also Ithaca's leading receiver with 204 yards on 19 catches.

Along with Scott, fullback Sean Huth and quarterback Ray DeCarr have combined for 1,782 yards and 22 touchdowns on the season.

For the Flyers, senior tailback Dave Jones will be looking to move up in the record books as the second all-time leading rusher for a single season. Last week against Drake, Jones gained 101 yards and scored two touchdowns.

It was the eighth time this season that Jones has gained 100 or more yards in a game. He currently leads the Flyers in rushing with 1,162 yards and in scoring with 17 TD's.

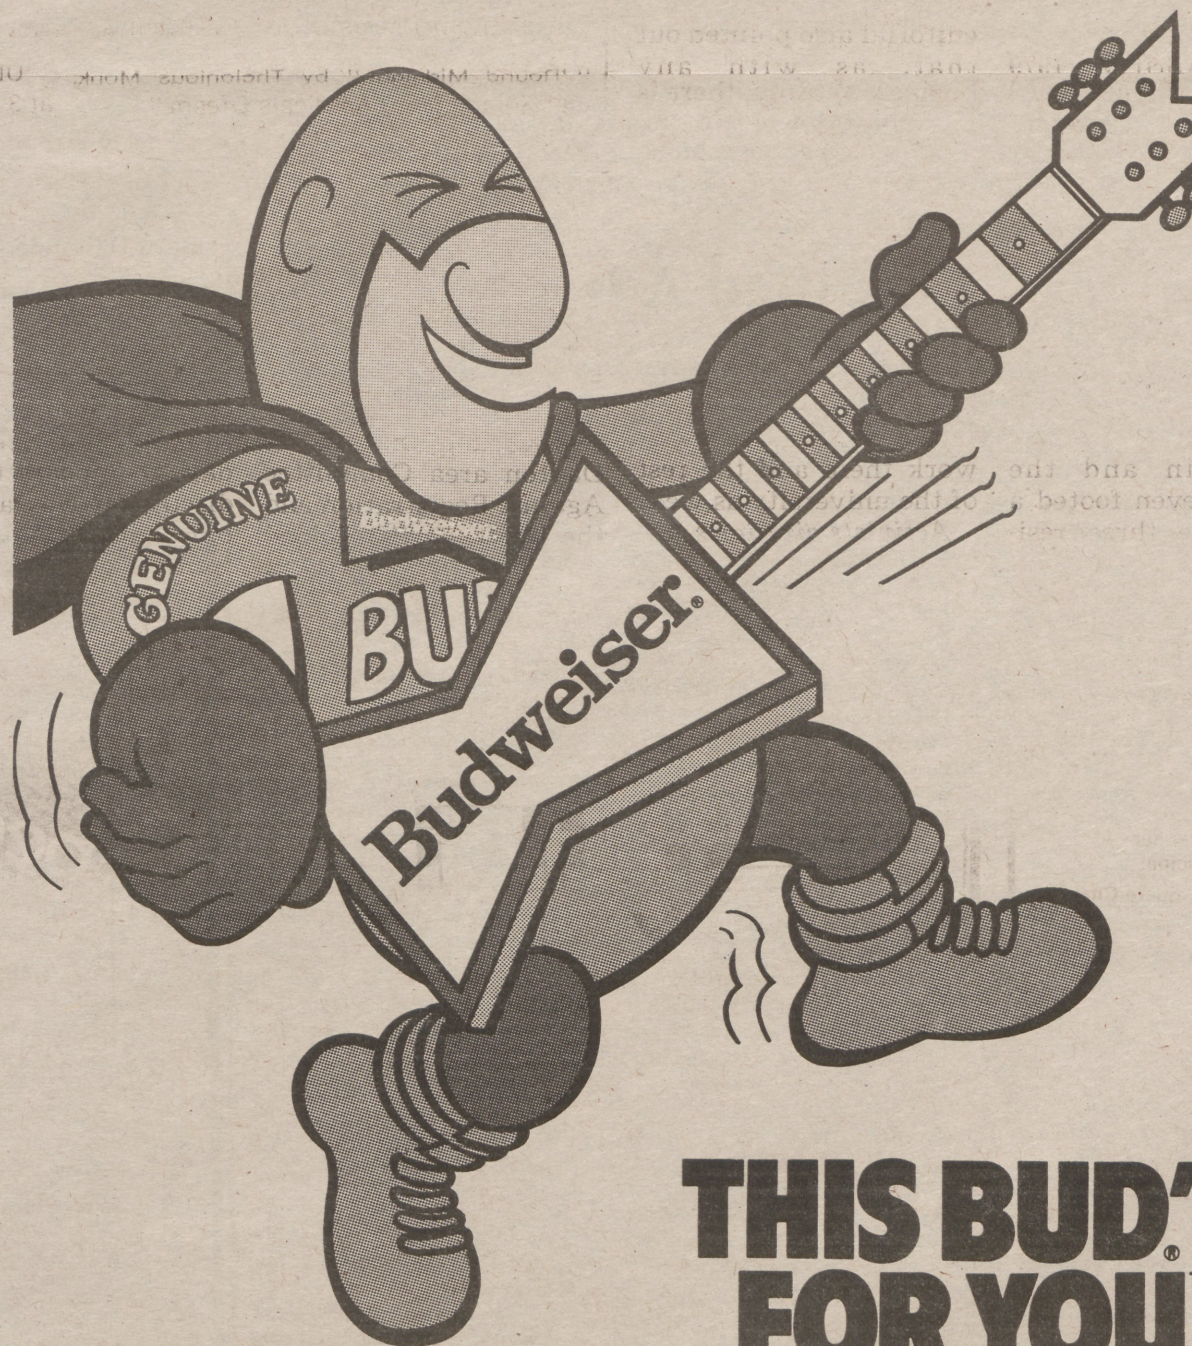

Jones is only the third

Dayton runner ever to gain 1,000 yards in a season. He went into last week's game in third place in Division III, averaging 132.6 yards per game.

Saturday's game will mark the second time that the two schools have met. Ithaca will look to avenge a 63-0 loss to the Flyers in the 1980 Division III Championship.

Game time Saturday at Welcome Stadium is at 1 p.m. instead of the usual 1:30 p.m.

Intramurals are 'Just for the fun of it'

Walk by Baujan Field any night this time of the year. Out on the field you will see people running around playing their favorite game, be it softball or football.

Inside the Fieldhouse there are others playing volleyball and soccer.

Granted, it's not that unusual to see people participating in various recreational activities. But these activities are being supervised and coordinated by UD students.

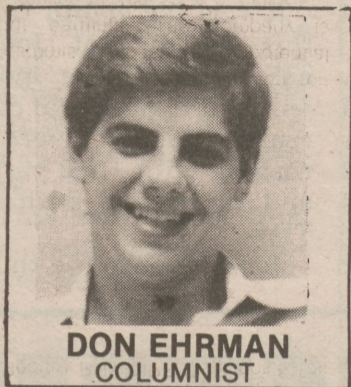

That is the Intramural Sports department, students helping students. "We are a service organization," says Dave Ostrander, assistant director of Intramural Sports. "We are here to provide recreation for the students, faculty and staff of the university."

According to Ostrander, the Intramural department offers over 100 sports each school year. "We try to offer a variety of sports," he said. "That way everyone can have something that appeals to them."

It looks like Ostrander is meeting his goal. "Last year we figured about 60 percent of the students participated in one way or another," he said. "And that doesn't include the overall use of the facilities like the PAC and the Fieldhouse."

Ostrander cites softball as the most popular sport, with over 2500 participants last year.

DON EHRLMAN
COLUMNIST

"Volleyball seems to be the new 'in' sport," Ostrander said. "I also added floor hockey, and in just three years it is up 50 percent in terms of participation," he added.

With all these activities taking place, Ostrander needs a sizeable staff to officiate and to supervise the different sports. He uses students to do the majority of the work.

"In terms of officials, I look for people who have a general knowledge of the game," he said. "But the most important quality I look for is decision making. If someone can't make a strong decision and then stick by it, then more than likely they won't be a good official."

According to Ostrander, finding good officials is often more luck than skill. "You don't know how they'll do until you get them out there in a game situation," he said. "Some people may know all the rules of the game, but if they can't apply their knowledge to a particular situation, then they're no good to me as an official."

Ostrander usually handles most of the discipline problems that occur throughout the year. "I try to be understanding about the complaining that goes on," he said. "But I realize that intramural sports are a release and complaining is a part of it."

Even though Ostrander allows participants to voice their opinions, he makes sure their criticism is constructive. "If someone has a legitimate problem, they're more than welcome to come and talk to me about it," he said. "But most of the time, they're just upset about the outcome of their particular game, and there's nothing I can do about it."

"Our staff knows more about the games than 80-90 percent of the student body," he said. "So most of the time, I'm going to side with my officials. That's just the way it has to be."

Even though his staff is busy covering all the current sports, Ostrander plans on expanding the program even more. "We've gotten the fraternities involved this year, and we want to continue to get more people in the program," he said.

Take a look at the intramural program here at UD. If you think they don't offer something for you, ask around; or better yet, stop in the Intramural Office in the PAC. You'll probably find that there is more there than you think.

Better yet, the next time you're playing an intramural game, think about what you're doing and who you're doing it for. Intramural games don't affect the national rankings or your stature in the eyes of your friends. If they did, they wouldn't be intramurals, would they?
