The recently formed Graduate Business Association of the University of Dayton has announced that on March 30, 1966 Dr. James H. Healey, B.S., M.A., Ph.D., will address the association's membership.

Dr. Healey is Adjunct Professor of Continuing Education at Ohio State University. His address will be given in the E. B. O'Leary lecture hall in the new School of Business Administration building - Miriam Hall - on the University of Dayton Campus.

Dr. Healey received his Ph.D. from Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania and his M.S. and B.S. from the University of Connecticut.

His fame as a business executive and educator is nationwide. Dr. Healey has taught at the University of Pennsylvania, the University of California and Ohio State University, and participates regularly in the various executive development programs at the schools.

Dr. Healey has been a leader for both orientation and workshop seminars for the American Management Association and is active in consulting projects throughout the country.

Among his many published works are Introduction to Business Management, Management of the Smaller Business and Executive Coordination and Control.

The president of the Graduate Business Association is Mr. Eugene Linsker. Dr. Norman George is the Director of UD MBA Program.

The public is invited to attend.
