Contemporary views on the standard of morality guiding the love between man and woman in today's society will be the concluding topic for the University of Dayton's current Religion in Life lecture series. Representatives of Wright State University and the University of Dayton will present a panel discussion of their opinions on Tuesday, February 15, at 4:00 and at 8:00 P.M. in the auditorium of Wohlleben Hall.

Reverend Richard Leidberg, Chaplain at Wright State University, and Reverend Norbert Burns, S.M., of the University of Dayton Theology department, will offer ministerial views on the subject; presenting the laymen's views will be panel member Mr. Randolph Lumpp, of the University of Dayton Theology department, and moderator for the group from UD's Philosophy department, Mr. John Chrisman. Development of the theme will take place during the question and answer period which will follow their presentation.

The program is open to the public. Tickets will be available at the door.
