DAYTON, Ohio, April 28, 1967 --- Four University of Dayton students won nominations to a Work-Study Program in Hamburg, Germany to be held this summer.

The aims of this program, which is supported by a grant from the overseas Assistance and Training Branch of the Office of Education, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, is to immerse American students in German culture through the coordinated experience of living with German families, studying with German students and working with German educators, businessmen, engineers and scientists.

The cooperative professional practice program was initiated at the University of Cincinnati and has since been absorbed by more than sixty universities. Today, as it was originally conceived in 1906, the University of Cincinnati program is based on integration of classroom exposure with work experience in the student's future vocation. It is the aim of the work-study program in Hamburg to extend the time-proven theory of education to a foreign country.

The official announcement of the University of Dayton student nominations named August Brunsman (German Major, A&S-4), Kathleen Mullen (History Major), Timothy Phillips (German Major, A&S-3) and Madelyn Stem (English, A&S-4), while Ronald Josey, History Major was chosen as an alternate.

A student who participates in this program will not only be challenged by the surroundings to think and speak in the foreign language, but will also be able to study the methods and ideas in his own field as they have developed outside the United States.

Furthermore, he may find it rewarding to test his own feelings about people of the guest country and in turn to imbue them with respect and understanding for the youth of the United States.
