DAYTON, Ohio, May 23, 1967 --- Dr. Brenda Frazier and Rev. Joseph Zeinz, S.M., two staff members of the University of Dayton Languages Department, have been selected to attend government sponsored summer institutes in their respective languages.

Dr. Frazier will attend a 7-week NDEA Institute for College and University Trainers of Prospective Modern Language Teachers at the University of Minnesota from June 19 to August 4. The Institute objectives are to explore current developments in foreign language education especially in the areas of curriculum construction, methods, testing, research and the contribution of linguistics.

The participants will also be acquainted with new materials and advances in technological media affecting the field. Workshops, seminars, lectures, group discussion and films will be integrated into the program.

Fr. Zeinz will participate in the National Arts and Humanities Institute for trainers of Latin teachers, also at the University of Minnesota, from June 18 to June 30. This two-week institute will encompass lectures and workshops covering teaching methods, linguistics, audio-visual materials and textbook evaluation. Fr. Zeinz is one of 30 participants chosen from around the country.

Dr. Frazier came to UD in the fall of 1966 as an Assistant professor of Spanish. She earned her B.A. at Rutgers University, M.A. at the University of Chicago and her doctorate at the University of Madrid, Spain. A member of Phi Beta Kappa Honorary Fraternity, Dr. Frazier studied under a Ford Foundation Fellowship at the University of Chicago and a Fullbright Fellowship for study in Spain.

Fr. Zeinz recently completed his Ph.D. in Classical Languages at Ohio State University. He has been an instructor at UD since 1964. He taught for 6 years at St. Joseph College in Yokohama, Japan, before coming to the University.
