DAYTON, Ohio, June 16, 1967 --- The University of Dayton Department of Languages will conduct an NDEA Institute in Spanish for secondary school teachers from June 26 to August 11. The seven week institute was authorized and funded by the NDEA in cooperation with the United States Office of Education.

Forty-five high school Spanish teachers from 16 states and overseas will participate in the program which is designed to improve the participants' audio-lingual proficiency. The fifteen-member staff will include instructors from the University of Dayton and several other universities around the country. All but three staff members are natives of Spanish-speaking countries.

The participants will speak only Spanish for the seven weeks of the institute. About 25-30 hours per week will be spent in class or the language laboratory while the remaining time will be in study and group activities such as lectures, discussions, Spanish films and social events.

The participants chosen from the 290 applications received by Institute Director Dr. James M. Ferrigno, Chairman of the U.D. Language Department are:
