DAYTON, Ohio, June 30, 1967 --- Dr. Donald C. Lord, whose article "Who Ever Heard of a Negro Cowboy" appeared in a recent issue of Kentucky School Journal, will be a guest lecturer at the University of Dayton NDEA Summer Institute in History on July 5, 6, and 7.

Thirty high school teachers of United States history and Social Studies from around the country are participating in the seven week Institute. Courses include a study of the role of the Negro People in the history of the United States and recent social issues in U.S. history.

Dr. Lord is an Assistant Professor of History at Eastern Kentucky University. He received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Oberlin College and both his Masters and Ph.D. from Western Reserve University. He has had several articles published including "Thai, Missionaries and Diplomats," in PACIFIC HISTORICAL REVIEW, "The King and the Apostle" accepted by SOUTH ATLANTIC QUARTERLY, and "Paperbacks and the Teaching of American History," accepted by THE SOCIAL STUDIES.

Dr. Rocco M. Donatelli, Associate Professor of History at U.D., is the Director of the Institute.
