DAYTON, Ohio, August 29, 1967 --- Three new professors, who have recently received their masters degrees, will join the University of Dayton's Department of English next week. Two of the three, Mr. Thomas Walsh and Mr. James Ferrelly, are graduates of UD's masters program in English. The third, Mr. Thomas Columbus, received his graduate degree from the University of Virginia in June.

Mr. Ferrellly is a 1964 graduate of Providence College and received his masters degree from UD in 1966. He was a graduate assistant in English at UD from 1964 through 1966 and in the 1966-67 school year was a teaching fellow at Boston University. The native of Newark, New Jersey, has completed one year of his doctorate work at Boston University and will finish at Miami University of Ohio while teaching in Dayton. He will also be Director of Freshman English at UD.

Mr. Walsh, who is a 1965 graduate of John Carroll University, completed his masters requirements and graduated from Dayton this past July. He has been a graduate assistant in English since 1965. He is from Barberton, Ohio.

Mr. Columbus, a native of Cleveland, graduated from Holy Cross College with a bachelor's degree in 1966 and earned his masters from the University of Virginia in June of this year. He was a participant in the University of Dayton's Educational Media Institute this summer. The Institute was conducted by UD's Communication Arts Department and was federally-funded.
