DAYTON, Ohio, January 2, 1969 — Negro history and literature will be the subjects of two courses offered in the evening school of the University of Dayton during the second term, January 6 - April 23.

"The History of the Negro in the New World" aims to "place in proper perspective the lasting contributions of the Negro to American life and culture." It will be given on Mondays and Wednesdays, 7:25 to 8:40 p.m., by Dr. Joakim Isaacs, assistant professor of history.

"Images of the Negro in American Literature" offers an opportunity for the student "to rediscover the literature of the American Negro that has been too long overlooked and to consider present and future trends of this literature." It will be given on Tuesday, 7:25 to 10:05 p.m., by Dr. Peter Arons, assistant professor of English.

The two courses may be audited or taken for academic credit (three hours each). Non-credit registration is through the Special Sessions office in Kennedy Union. Those desiring credit for the courses should apply to the Office of the Registrar.

Dr. Isaacs is a graduate of Fairleigh Dickinson University (’58). He received his doctorate from the University of Wisconsin in 1966. Dr. Arons is a graduate of New York University (’57), receiving his doctorate from Yale in 1964.
