DAYTON, Ohio, February 27, 1969 --- The fifth in a series of six lectures on Pope Paul's encyclical, "Humanae Vitae", conducted by the Department of Theological Studies at the University of Dayton, will be conducted next Tuesday, March 4, in Wohlleben Hall Auditorium at 7:30 p.m.

Subject of this lecture will be "Interdisciplinary Response to the Encyclical, Humanae Vitae." It will feature a panel of educators and one medical doctor. Dr. Albert Kunnen, who practices in obstetrics and gynecology; Rev. Norbert Burns and Rev. William Anderson of UD's Department of Theological Studies, Dr. James MacMahon of the Department of Biology and Dr. Robert Noland of the Department of Psychology make up the panel.

The series which started in November is the result of a scholarly study by the Department of Theological Studies, according to Rev. Matthew Kohmescher, Chairman. It was felt in view of the controversy over Pope Paul's encyclical that the department should offer an opportunity to the general public to understand the full implications of the document.

Subjects of the four prior lectures were "Nature of Authority Within the Church," "Authority and the Natural Law," "Authority and the Present Encyclical," and "Philosophical Argumentation of the Encyclical." The talks will conclude in April with the subject, "Pastoral Handling of the Problem."

All lectures are open to the public and consist of lecture and a question and answer period.
