DAYTON, Ohio, June 3, 1968 --- Mr. Graham Watt, Dayton City Manager, will visit Political Science classes at the University of Dayton Thursday morning as a part of the visitation program of the International City Managers Association of Washington, D.C.

The association is on a campaign this year to interest college graduates in municipal employment. The national program, which will be taken to 25 universities throughout the country, is entitled, "Careers in Urban Administration and Affairs."

In their report to city managers throughout the United States, the ICMA urges individual members to formulate their own programs. This is the reason for Mr. Watts' Thursday visit. He will attend the 8 a.m. and 10:50 a.m. Political Science classes in St. Joseph's Hall and then be available for discussion after each class.

The ICMA, in a report to its members recently, said in part:

"As the problems of cities increase in magnitude, so does the shortage of well-qualified administrators to solve them. At every level of government there are cries for more manpower and more competent administrators.

"A survey of all U.S. cities over 25,000 population conducted by the International City Managers' Association indicated nearly 2,500 job openings for professional and managerial personnel in slightly more than 300 cities....To solve these manpower problems the ICMA has launched a massive program to interest college students in careers in local government......."
