DAYTON, Ohio, March 19, 1969 --- The University Arts Series at the University of Dayton will present the Indiana University Chamber Singers in the fourth Cameo Concert Monday, March 24 at 8:15 P.M. in the Kennedy Union Ballroom.

Members of the Indiana University Chamber Singers are all students in the University's School of Music, with their class rank ranging from freshman to doctoral students. The 24 outstanding student singers will render chorus music from the 15th century to the present.

The Chamber Singers is a regular ensemble organized in 1959 under the name of the Madrigal Singers. The rapid expansion of its repertoire led to the change of title. Annually, the singers give concerts on the campus and throughout the state. In 1961, the group was invited to sing for the American Choral Directors convention in Columbus, Ohio. The singers undertook their first extensive tour off the Indiana University campus in 1962, which included concerts at Carnegie Recital Hall in New York City and at the First Baptist Church in Washington, D.C.

Until 1965, the group was directed by Hugh B. Johnson Jr., assistant professor of music at Indiana University and now a member of the music faculty at Oberlin University. The present director is Don Moses, instructor in music. Moses is a graduate of Fort Hays Kansas State College and has the master of music degree from Indiana University.
