DAYTON, Ohio, September 21, 1970 --- The Special Sessions Department at the University of Dayton, in October, has courses for:

1. The housewife who hasn't kept pace with recent innovations in housekeeping;
2. The woman, married or single, who would like to understand the psychology of her species;
3. Persons of Eastern European extraction who would like to be brought up to date on the culture of Eastern Europe;
4. The business supervisor who would like a better understanding of his employees;
5. The business and professional men who would care to study the operations research methods in science and technology;
6. Supervisors who need further training in basic management principles, and,
7. The technicians who need a review in the elements of metallurgy.

Very Rev. Dusan Petrovich of UD's Fine Arts Department will serve as instructor for "Contemporary Cultural Life in Eastern Europe," which begins October 1 and continues for eight Thursdays. Father Petrovich will discuss Czech films and theater, Hungarian poetry and satire, Polish music and painting, Albanian cultural revolution, Yugoslavian architecture and philosophy, East German opera, Romanian television, and Bulgarian literature. He will point up the differences between the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

Dr. Charles Scheidler, Chief Psychologist at the University of Dayton, is conducting his highly-successful, "Psychology for Women," beginning on October 5 and running eight sessions through November 23. His subject matter includes learning to live with oneself and with others, motivation, sanity and the care and feeding of husbands.

Professor Joseph Rosa of UD's Psychology Department is the instructor for "The Supervisor and his Job: People," which develops the personal needs in handling employees. Mr. M. Shirazi of the UD Research Institute will be the lecturer for "Operations Research Methods in Science & Technology," which begins October 6 and continues 10 sessions.

The course, "Elements of Metallurgy," will be taught by Dr. Cyril Pierce of Wright Patterson Air Force Base and Dr. James Buckenmeyer will conduct the "Basic Management for First Line Supervisors" program, starting October 14 and continuing for eight sessions.
