DAYTON, Ohio, April 19, 1971 — "The Military in American Life", (AM S 405), will be the topic in the American Culture program this fall at the University of Dayton.

The course, which is being offered by the American Studies Program, will be conducted by Dr. Francis Henninger, director of the program.

The direction in which the course is intended will be to investigate and uncover objectively some of the basic truths concerning the military in our cultures.

Students in "The Military in American Life" course will be expected to contribute information learned through knowledge from his own major academic field. These contributions will then be discussed at length. Differing points of view and opinions will be encouraged. All participants will be expected to demonstrate familiarity with the laws of evidence.

Dr. Henninger strongly believes that material for AM S 405 is an historically important and currently urgent topic, and will be an appropriate and valuable elective for juniors and seniors in many academic areas.

Inquiries about "The Military in American Life" are welcome and may be directed to Dr. Henninger at 229-3417 or 233-9985.
