DAYTON, Ohio, May 5, 1971 --- Mr. Raymond Nartker, Director of Libraries at the University of Dayton, and Mr. Ray Creech, president of the Dayton and Ohio Councils of the Blind, announced today the creation of a recording center for the blind in the University's new $4.8 million library, which is yet unnamed.

Mr. Nartker said the new center would be developed and operated by the Dayton Council for the Blind. The Council is a charitable, non-profit organization concerned with the improvement of the status and welfare of the blind.

Mr. Creech said the center is needed because less than 15 per cent of those who are blind can make good use of Braille.

Mr. Creech said that approximately 2,000 blind persons are in the Dayton area where there has been inadequate facilities of this type. He noted that blind persons throughout the midwest, through the cooperation of the Library of Congress and Recording for the Blind in New York City, will learn of the center and have access to it.
