DAYTON, Ohio, May 10, 1971 --- The University of Dayton, Department of Communication Arts, has announced that Gregory E. Schettler of Springfield is the recipient of the annual James D. Shouse Award. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Schettler of 2344 Limestone Avenue, Springfield, and a graduate of Central Catholic High School there.

The $200 cash award, sponsored by the AVCO Broadcasting Corporation, is presented to the outstanding U.D. senior broadcaster in Communication Arts for his "academic and co-curricular achievement in radio and television broadcasting arts."

Mr. Schettler has been a staff announcer for the U.D. radio station, WVUD-FM. He has participated in that station's program selection, and has been the announcer for several of WVUD's remote broadcasts. He will join the Communication Arts faculty at UD in the fall.

James D. Shouse was an AVCO Broadcasting pioneer. Through AVCO he helped to bring television to this area, and he was associated with the design and establishment of the transmission plant for the Voice of America.

Eight universities participate in the James D. Shouse Award program. Besides the University of Dayton, they are the universities of Cincinnati, Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio U., Miami, Ohio State and Xavier.
