DAYTON, Ohio, May 28, 1971 --- Dr. Donna Streifthau, professor of home economics at the University of Dayton, is the author of an article in the current issue of Antiques magazine on the early 19th century cabinet makers of Cincinnati. The article was the result of research on the subject for the period, 1819-30. At the National Home Economics Convention in Denver in July she will report on the results of her research on the subject.

Dr. Streifthau, a resident of Middletown, will conduct a housing and home furnishings workshop at UD, June 14-25. Slide lectures, speakers and field trips will be used to study arrangements, furniture styles and decorative details. Color, design and consumer aspects of home interiors both past and present will be emphasized.

Dr. Streifthau received the best of show award at the art exhibit at the Middletown Fine Arts center with a ceramic piece. She also took first in ceramics and in copper enameling.
