DAYTON, Ohio, December 7, 1970 --- "Judaism and Christianity," a course in the Program of Judaic Studies at the University of Dayton, will be offered during the Winter term under the sponsorship of the Department of Theological Studies. The term starts on Tuesday, January 5, but registration is currently in progress in St. Mary's Hall.

The course, which probes into the long-standing rupture of the parent and daughter faiths, will be taught by Dr. Eric L. Friedland, Sanders Professor of Judaics since 1968. Dr. Friedland, who will use UD and United Theological Seminary faculty members as guest lecturers and resource people, says the course will be conducted in symposium-like fashion.

Literature for the course will include Apocrypha, Dead Sea Scrolls and Mishnah. The students will study the Messianism, Apocalypticism and Teshuvah concepts and personalities such as Philo and Hillel. The text book will be Glatzer's The Rest Is Commentary.

Dr. Friedland is a graduate of Boston University and has his master's and doctoral degrees from Brandeis University. He taught at Wayne State University in Detroit before coming to Dayton two years ago.
