

Design Across Culture

Lauren Riley, Kat Brothers & Bill Farmer | Cassandra Secrease Ph.D.

OUR ENVIRONMENT SAYS A LOT ABOUT US

The spaces that we inhabit in our daily lives can actually affect our emotions to a great extent. As human beings we buy into the culture of places in order to suit our personal needs and it is often the space – not a particular item – that can affect us. Global influences on design are not new, but have been felt for centuries.

Trends and the designers themselves are crossing boundaries thus creating globalization in design.

PLACES → SYMBOLS → COLORS
