DAYTON, Ohio, August 6, 1971 --- The University of Dayton has announced the retirement of Professor Vincent Jukes of the Communications Arts department.

Prof. Jukes leaves August 1 after 41 years of teaching, 36 at Ohio University. He has spent the last five years at UD, as associate professor. Jukes was brought to UD to help form the Communications Arts graduate program, a program that started last year. Formerly, he served as Director of Radio, Television and audio-visual service, and coordinator of veteran affairs at Ohio U.

The 64 year-old veteran of WW II graduated from Ohio University in 1930, studying theater, drama, and history, and received his master’s degree from Western Reserve University.

Ohio’s history of radio can thank Prof. Jukes for his contribution. In 1938, he developed WOUB-AM at Ohio U. and in 1949 he helped form WOUB-FM, the first University FM station in Ohio.

While at UD, Jukes developed and directed an Educational Media Institute in 1967, which was funded by the US Office of Education. It was designed to instruct full-time university and college professors in the most efficient use of audio-visual aides, including television.

Professor Jukes will make his residence in Sarasota, Florida. He leaves UD regretfully, but Sarasota gives him the opportunity to enjoy his golf and fishing. Besides, it offers much for a drama buff. Sarasota is the home of the Asola Theater, a State-run project, which employs professional personnel in its productions.

Neither will Professor Jukes give up his teaching career entirely. He will be conducting one course at Manatee Jr. College in Bradenton, Florida.
