DAYTON, Ohio, November 2, 1971 --- One of the foremost biblical scholars in the world, Dr. Joachim Jeremias, professor of the New Testament at the University of Gottingen, Germany, will deliver a public lecture on Friday, November 5 at 7:30 at the University of Dayton in Wohlleben auditorium. The topic of the lecture will be "The Words of Jesus in the Pauline Epistles."

Professor Jeremias has studied in particular the parables and sayings of Jesus. For example, he wrote a book on the parables of Jesus that revolutionized studies in this area. He has argued strongly that the Aramaic word, "Abba," was actually used by Jesus Himself. He pioneered a method for establishing the authentic words of Jesus in which he works from the Greek accounts as given in the Gospels back to the original Aramaic that Jesus spoke.

He has written numerous articles for professional journals and has authored a number of books. Some of those more familiar to the American audience are: The Parables of Jesus, The Eucharistic Words of Jesus, Jerusalem in the Time of Jesus, Unknown Sayings of Jesus, Infant Baptism in the First Four Centuries, and The Central Message of the New Testament. His latest book in English, published in 1971, is New Testament Theology: The Proclamation of Jesus.

The lecture is sponsored by the Department of Theological Studies of the University of Dayton. The public is cordially invited.
