DAYTON, Ohio, February 28, 1972 --- The University of Dayton recently received the final payment on a three-year $25,000 grant from the International Business Machines Corporation. The check for $10,000 was presented by members of IBM's Marketing Department, Mr. Daniel M. Brundage, Manager; and Thomas Gallagher and Donald Simmons, representatives.

The $25,000 grant was made through its commitment to community involvement, one of many methods in which the corporation participates in community service.

In accepting the final installment, Reverend Raymond A. Roesch, S.M., University President, noted: "...We take this opportunity to again express our heartfelt appreciation for this generous assistance which means so very much to us during this period of extremely severe financial problems."

"We value IBM's friendship and support most highly and consider it an honor to be able to include your fine organization among our many business and industrial benefactors."

IBM has awarded UD $57,460.24 through its community involvement and Matching Grants programs since 1960. In the latter program, IBM matches gifts given by employees to their alma maters.
